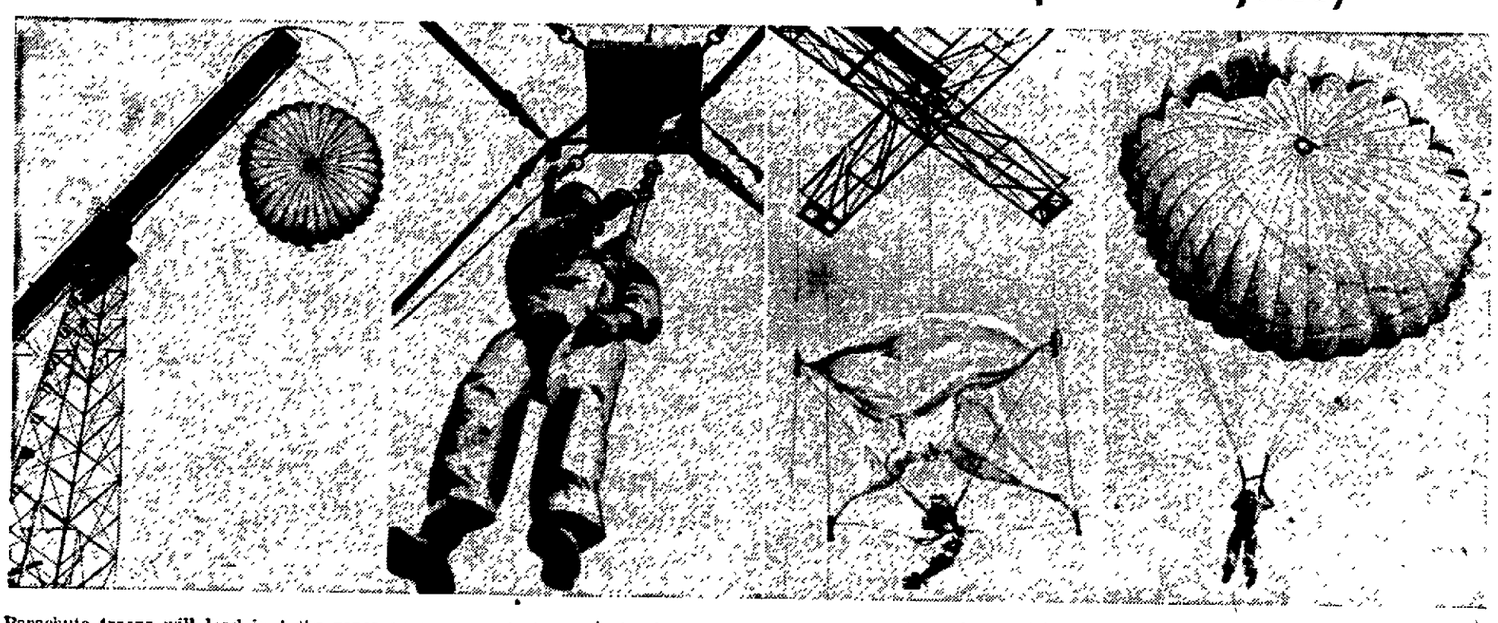
United States Trains Its First Parachute Troops In New Jersey



Parachute troops will land in New Jersey as Uncle Sam's first contingent, a practice platoon from Fort Benning, Ga., learns the ropes on a parachute tower similar to the one at the New York World's Fair. The 48 men and two officers will make practice leaps for a week from the two 125-foot towers at Hightstown, N. J. Left, a student is raised to top of one of the towers for a trial leap, seated in a chair and guided by wires. Second, he practices use of the ripcord. Third, the 'chute has just left the tower and is not yet inflated. Fourth, the student has mastered the technique and is coming down on his own "wings," free of all safety devices.

Promised relief from the 90-degree heat wave which has kept Mansfield in its grip for the past week began arriving at noon today when a three-degree drop in temperature was recorded within an hour.

Enos Sprunger, official weather observer for Richland county, said thermometer readings fell from 89 at 11 a. m. to 86 at the noon hour.

The temperature drop was believed to the "mass of cool air" which weather observers said settled over the west and was moving eastward.

A heavy thunderstorm last evening served to cool off the city which had sweltered all day in temperatures which reached as high as 95. The rain, however, was localized. Some sections of the county didn't receive any. In Mansfield the precipitation amounted to .43 of an inch.

The cool air blowing in from the west was expected to drop temperatures from three to eight degrees more, forecasters said.

Last night's storm carried the

OFFICERS RAID RIVER VESSEL

Gambling Devices Taken From Excursion Boat.

PITTSBURGH —(AP)— An Ohio river excursion of the steamer Senator ended with unexpected excitement for its 2,000 passengers when state liquor board agents, Allegheny county and city police raided the boat on docking early today.

The passengers were allowed to disembark after about 30 men, including members of the crew and operators of concessions aboard, were arrested.

District Attorney Andrew T. Park led the raid, which police said yielded several patrol wagon loads of slot machines and other gambling devices.

Observers Report Holdout of Lone Republic About to Come to Close.

BULLETIN

HAVANA —(AP)— A subcommittee of the American foreign ministers conference reached virtual agreement today on a program to prevent transfer of ownership of European possessions in the western hemisphere.

(By Associated Press)

HAVANA—Argentina, the lone "hold-out," was reported today to be ready to yield on the question of signing some sort of agreement to protect the western hemisphere against threats arising from its European-held possessions.

Optimism grew among delegates to pan-American conference here that a compromise accord acceptable to Argentina would be reached soon.

After a brief session last night of the peace commission of the conference, one delegate predicted agreement today and a source close to the Argentine delegation reported progress in the discussions.

(In Buenos Aires, Argentine Foreign Minister Jose Maria Cantilo expressed belief an agreement would be reached after "a little mutual compromise.")

At the same time proposals to develop inter-American economy and strike vigorously at "fifth column" activities progressed through committees toward virtually certain adoption.

Chief Warns Stop Signs Must Be Observed In City

Police Chief Meade K. Bates today warned against the "flagrant" violations of the stop sign ordinance and asked for co-operation of motorists in observing the regulation as a means of reducing the city's mounting accident toll.

The chief asserted that motorists have been ignoring the stop signs at thoroughfare intersections by "coasting" through the streets.

"Stop signs mean exactly what they say," the chief stated. "It doesn't mean reducing speed when entering a street where a stop should be made."

He said that motorcycle officers checking busy intersections have issued tickets to as many as 15 drivers in 15 minutes for violating the regulation, and on one occasion had "warned" a city employe who "merely slowed up" at the intersection.

He added that officers had "put out" an unprecedented number of citations for the stop sign violation during the past three weeks.

"We've issued tags but it hasn't seemed to help the situation any," he declared. "We don't want a motorist's money. We want their co-operation in observing the law."

HITLER BUSY DRAWING MAP FOR BALKANS

Sees Bulgarian Envoys After Visit From Rumanian Representatives.

HUNGARY WINS LAND

Report Bucharest Agrees To Cede Part of Disputed Transylvania.

(By International News Service)

SALZBURG, Germany — Chancellor Adolf Hitler, in his second momentous conference of the Balkan problem in two days, received Bulgarian Premier Bogdan Filoff and Foreign Minister Ivan Popoff at Berchtesgaden at 4 p. m. today.

The Bulgarian statesmen came directly from an earlier conference with German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop.

Yesterday Chancellor Hitler laid the German view before Rumanian Premier Ion Gigurtu and Foreign Minister Mihail Manoilescu, who are now in Rome for a conference with Premier Mussolini. Slovakian representatives also were to visit Salzburg for discussions with Von Ribbentrop.

It was stated that the conference with the Bulgarian diplomats progressed in routine fashion and that the southeastern European states were told that Germany is interested primarily in seeing Balkan revision carried out in a peaceful, orderly manner at an "opportune" time.

Details of the Balkan settlement as well as methods and nature of the revision should be settled among the Balkan states themselves through mutual consultations, the Bulgarians were told.

BUDAPEST — (INS) — Rumania has agreed to cede part of Transylvania to Hungary in satisfaction of this country's territorial claims upon the Bucharest government, it was reported reliably today.

Indicating that the wheels for the projected carve-up of Rumania already are well in motion, diplomatic quarters at Bucharest were reported to have been informed that Rumanian Premier Ion Gigurtu in Salzburg, Germany, yesterday handed a memorandum to German Foreign Minister Joachim van Ribbentrop, offering part of Transylvania to Hungary.

The memorandum proposed a plebiscite in the other sections of Transylvania which are still under dispute between the two countries.

(The official British radio in a broadcast picked up this morning in New York by NBC said that Bulgarian claims against Rumania for southern Dobruja, while not recognized by Germany, are viewed with favor by Russia as well as Great Britain.)

DELAY ACTION

Committee Invites Stimson to Discuss Training.

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — The house military affairs committee decided today to invite Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson to testify on the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill. He was expected to appear next week.

The measure would require registration of approximately 42,000,000 men between 18 and 64 inclusive, for some form of military or home defense training. If enacted, 400,000 men would be drafted for training by October.

The committee's decision indicated delay in house action on the measure since original plans had called for ending the hearings on Tuesday.

Say French Used Trick For Arrest

(By International News Service)

LONDON—Former Premier Edouard Daladier of France, now held by the Petain government for trial, actually was en route to London to establish a "free" French committee when he was taken prisoner, the London Daily Telegraph said today.

The newspaper charged that Daladier, instead of being permitted to come to London after the French capitulation to Germany, was tricked into going aboard a vessel bound for Casablanca and immediately made a prisoner.

Meanwhile, it was reported, former Premier Paul Reynaud was also in custody and awaiting trial at Meknes.

In a dispatch from the "French frontier," the Daily Telegraph also charged that discontent, resentment and grumbling are now widely evident at Vichy, present seat of the French regime of Marshal Henri Philippe Petain.

Shortages in France of food, clothing, leather, soap and oil are acute, the dispatch stated, adding that the French are becoming "aware that the Germans are holding the entire nation responsible for the war."

BATTERY WAITS HIKE IN FORCE

Increase in Officers, More Men Planned for Ohio Guardsmen Units.

Mansfield's Battery D, 134th Field Artillery may be affected by the order which went out today from the war department for the increase of 91 officers in the Ohio National Guard. Capt. R. J. Nichols, commanding officer of the battery, said today that he had two non-commissioned officers who were in line for promotion.

The order came directly from Adj. Gen. Gilson D. Light. Informed sources said the next move probably would be to increase the Ohio guard ranks from 10,703 to 20,000 authorized for the state under the national defense act.

At least 44 officers are scheduled for promotion and an equal number will be raised from non-commissioned ranks, Light said.

Twelve new officers each are to be assigned to the 147 infantry, Cincinnati; and the 148th and 166th, both of Columbus. Three officers each are to be added to the 134th and 135th field artillery regiments; eight to the 112th quartermasters; six each to companies H of Ashland, I of Mt. Vernon and G of Akron; two each to companies in Bellfontaine and Van Wert.

No reason was given for the action which will raise the guard's officer personnel to the full peace time strength of 836 men by August 1.

Batetery D has received a "superior" rating for two years in succession, one of the few companies in the state guard to win this recognition. Capt. Nichols said today he had not received notice of any change in his officer personnel, and he did not know whether the three new officers would be for the regiment's headquarters or not.

Ghost Sought By Process Servers In Divorce Case

LOS ANGELES — (U.P.) — Process servers looked for the ghost, Sho-Sha, today. They had a subpena for him.

Dr. William A. Boyce, a wealthy eye specialist, contesting the divorce suit of his attractive, middle-aged wife, Lillian, says Sho-Sha is her "soul mate" and yesterday his attorneys demanded a subpena for him.

Superior Judge Clement D. Nye thereupon issued one and told deputies to serve it. If they don't locate him, Boyce's attorney, S. S. Hahn, said he would try to produce Sho-Sha in the courtroom by means of a seance.

Mrs. Boyce, testifying, said she "vibrated to a higher plane" than her husband "because he drank a great deal." Sho-Sha was not her soul mate, she said; he was her teacher.

Mrs. Boyce said Sho-Sha was just a pet name. The ghost's name is Sheland Shaimond.

Successes Also Claimed For Undersea Craft Against Armed Opponents.

AIR RAIDS CONTINUE

Britain's Royal Air Force Is Kept Busy Defending Island Kingdom.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—British fighter planes clashed with clouds of German bombers roaring across the southeast coast today in the third successive day of unprecedented wholesale raids on England.

(By Associated Press)

Further inroads on Britain's merchant marine and destruction of more of her port facilities were claimed today by the German supreme command.

The Germans reported their prized speedboats, darting off the southern coast of England, had sent four merchant ships totaling 32,000 tons to the bottom and had set fire to another ship of 2,000 tons.

Successes were claimed, too, for Nazi undersea craft, the Berlin communique citing that one U-boat sent down "six armed enemy merchant ships" totaling 33,338 tons, that another sank 26,338 tons in addition to the British destroyer Whirlwind, previously reported, while a third went up against a convoy and dispersed it after sinking the British merchant steamer Sambre.

Nazi warplanes, said the high command, staged reconnaissance flights as far north as the Shetland islands and several British points were listed as bomb targets where "numerous fires were observed."

Britain's Royal Air Force and her anti-aircraft defenders had their hands full again today as Nazi sky raiders resumed methodical forays. Two of the raiders were shot down. The daylight raids followed night assaults in which a woman and a man were killed.

The war in the Mediterranean-African theater was marked by another still air bombardment of Malta by the Italians, British air raids on Italian African positions, and a desultory bombardment of Alexandria which caused no reported damage or casualties.

COMING HOME

Phillips Plans to Report on Italian Situation.

ROME —(U.P.)— An American embassy spokesman announced today that United States Ambassador William Phillips would leave Monday for the United States for a short leave of absence during which he would confer with President Roosevelt.

Phillips intends to take a plane for Spain Monday morning, halting at Madrid as the guest of United States Ambassador Alexander Weddell, and then fly to Lisbon, Portugal, to embark in the American export liner Excalibur, sailing Aug. 1 for New York.

Embassy quarters minimized the political significance of the ambassador's absence, but admitted that he would have an opportunity to discuss the war situation with Mr. Roosevelt.

DEFLATE MYTH

Michigan Professors Declare Battles Don't Make Rain.

—ANN ARBOR, Mich. — (U.P.) — A popular superstition current during the World war that bombs and heavy artillery fire in Europe caused rains in the United States has been debunked by University of Michigan scientists.

Profs. Daniel L. Rich and Ernest F. Barker of the department of physics issued statements to correct the misconception which, they said, has been revived during the current conflict.

The scientists pointed out that rain is caused when water vapor attached to dust particles cools sufficiently to concentrate into drops heavy enough to be pulled to the ground by gravitation.

The scientists pointed out that there has not been enough rain on the battlefields to stop Germany's war machine and mire tanks in mud. If the belief were true, they said, perhaps the lightning advance of the German army into France would have been slowed.

While dust particles might be accumulated through heavy bombings, they pointed out that without presence of sufficient water vapor there could be no rain.

In this respect, the physicists compared the battlefields of Europe to industrial Pittsburgh. Dense clouds of dust particles hang over the city, they said, but precipitation charts reveal no excess rain for Pittsburgh.

At any rate, rain would fall on the battlefields and not in the United States.

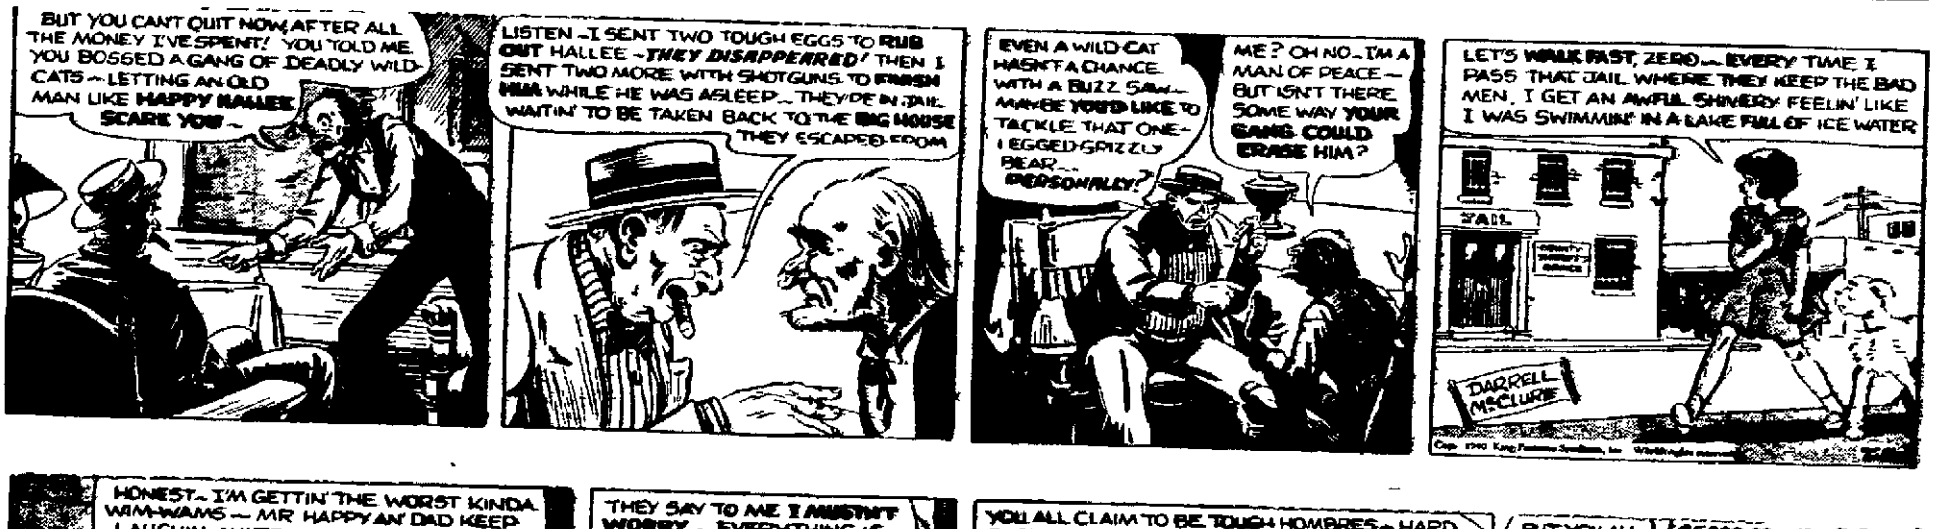
I'M AN OLD COW-HAND



BUT YOU CAN'T QUIT NOW AFTER ALL THE MONEY I'VE SPENT! YOU TOLD ME YOU BOSSED A GANG OF DEADLY WILD-CATS – LETTING AN OLD MAN LIKE HAPPY HALLEE SCARE YOU –
LISTEN – I SENT TWO TOUGH EGGS TO RUB OUT HALLEE – THEY DISAPPEARED! THEN I SENT TWO MORE WITH SHOTGUNS TO FINISH HIM WHILE HE WAS ASLEEP – THEY'RE IN JAIL WAITIN' TO BE TAKEN BACK TO THE BIG HOUSE THEY ESCAPED FROM EVEN A WILD CAT HASN'T A CHANCE WITH A BUZZ SAW – MAYBE YOU'D LIKE TO TACKLE THAT ONE-EGGED GRIZZLY BEAR – PERSONALLY?
ME? OH NO – I'M A MAN OF PEACE – BUT ISN'T THERE SOME WAY YOUR GANG COULD ERASE HIM?
LET'S WALK FAST, ZERO – EVERY TIME I PASS THAT JAIL WHERE THEY KEEP THE BAD MEN, I GET AN AWFUL SHIVERY FEELIN' LIKE I WAS SWIMMIN' IN A LAKE FULL OF ICE WATER
JAIL
DARRELL McCLURE

HONEST – I'M GETTIN' THE WORST KINDA WIM-WAMS – MR HAPPY AN' DAD KEEP LAUGHIN AN' TELLIN' ME JOKES EVERY TIME I SEE 'EM –
THEY SAY TO ME I MUSTN'T WORRY – EVERYTHING IS GRAND – BUT THEY BOTH WEAR TWO GUNS FILLED WITH BULLETS ALL THE TIME!
YOU ALL CLAIM TO BE TOUGH HOMBRES – HARD CASES – WILLING TO HIRE YOUR GUNS OUT TO ANY ONE WHO CAN PAY YOUR PRICE – I'M OFFERING $5,000.00 CASH TO HAVE AN OLD, ONE-LEGGED BUZZARD RUBBED OUT –
BUT YOU ALL ACT PLUMB DISINTERESTED – WHAT'S WRONG? COULDN'T ANY OF YOU BOYS USE $5 000 00 ?
$5,000 00 WOULD BUY A MIGHTY FANCY COFFIN – I KEEP THINKIN 'BOUT THE POOR MILD OLD HOMBRE WITH ONLY ONE LEG – TWO GUNS – AN' TWELVE BRIGHT AN' SHINY BULLETS!
DARRELL McCLURE

NICE, PEACEFUL-LOOKIN' LITTLE TOWN – YOU NOTICE ALL THE LAW MEN CARRYIN' SAWED-OFF SHOT-GUNS – IF JEFF HIRES US ON HERE – WE'RE GONNA BURN PLENTY OF POWDER!
LET'S CAFE
LET'S RATTLE OUR HOCKS OUTA THIS TOWN – IT'S PLUMB UNHEALTHY – WAGES OFFERED FOR GUNMEN ARE TOO HIGH TO SUIT ME!
TOO HIGH?
YEAH – TOO HIGH! I AIN'T EXACTLY A LITTLE, WOOLY, WHITE LAMB – BUT THE BARTENDER'S A FRIEND OF MINE – THIS TOWN'S PLUMB UNHEALTHY FOR OUR KIND – HEAVY WAGES ARE NO GOOD UNLESS YOU CAN KEEP ALIVE TO SPEND 'EM!"
– AND THEN DUSTY WENT FOR HIS GUN – BUT BEFORE HE GOT A CHANCE TO THROW LEAD – OLD DAD BLAMIT SHOT THE GUN OUTA HIS HAND – AND A COUPLE OF DUSTY'S FINGERS WENT WITH HIS GUN!
DARRELL McCLURE

DAD BLAMIT! LOOKS LIKE THIS WAR'S A GOIN' TO GO ON FOREVER – SOON AS WE CLEAN UP ONE CREW OF GUN MEN – A NEW CREW COMES A-DRIFTIN' IN LET 'EM COME! AS LONG AS WE GOT PLENTY OF LEAD, A BURYIN' GROUND AN' A GRAVE-DIGGER – THEY'RE WELCOME!
NO! THE WAR MUST STOP – INNOCENT LIVES ARE INVOLVED – WE MUST FIND THE FIEND WHO IS HIRING ALL THE IMPORTED KILLERS!!
GUN RUNNER
GEE, ZERO, IT'S SO NICE AN' PEACEFUL AN' QUIET OUT HERE I KEEP THINKIN' MAY-BE ALL THE SHOOTIN' AN' FIGHTIN' IN TOWN ISN'T REALLY TRUE – BUT JUST A MOVIE WHERE FOLKS ARE ONLY MAKIN' BELIEVE

Japan Perturbed Over Possible American Embargo

WAR SUPPLIES NECESSARY IN CHINESE FIGHT

Roosevelt Insists Control Designed to Conserve Defense Resources.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—United States foreign policy, particularly in the Far East, followed a baffling course today that kept Japan guessing as to whether she will get the American aviation gasoline, tetraethyl lead and iron and steel scrap she needs to keep her war in China going.

Japanese circles here were more perturbed over President Roosevelt's order placing those products under export license control, when they learned that the government had permitted a Russian firm to charter an American oil tanker for a trans-Pacific voyage.

Mr. Roosevelt insisted that the licensing control was not an embargo and that it was designed principally to conserve vital resources for American defense.

He reiterated that contention in a proclamation and order specifying the materials which will be affected when the control becomes effective on Aug. 1.

The proclamation specified that the licenses would have to be obtained to export high octane gasolines of various descriptions, aviation lubricating oil, tetraethyl lead, (used in manufacturing anti-knock gasoline) and No. 1 heavy melting iron and steel scrap.

Japanese circles, in expressing concern over the restrictions, pointed out that in addition to large purchases of scrap metal for war industries, their country also uses considerable quantities of American aviation gasoline.

Japan probably will test the new regulations as soon as they become effective, by applying for export licenses. If they are refused or limited, she could then decide that they constitute an embargo. Japan has threatened reprisals if an embargo is enforced.

The treasury and the maritime commission have prevented the chartering of American ships to carry oil to Spain, giving rise to British hopes that this nation may be contemplating an embargo which would prevent any American oil seeping through to Germany.

Satko Family's Home-Made Boat Reaches Juneau

JUNEAU, Alaska. — (U.P.) — Mr. and Mrs. Paul Satko and their seven children tied up the "Ark of Juneau" today at the end of a 1,050 mile voyage from Seattle.

The Satkos, who had set out in their home-made boat, powered by a 12-year-old automobile engine, to find a homestead in Alaska, planned to remain here a year, then perhaps, sail for Cook inlet, Alaska. Another 1,000 miles to the northwest. Mrs. Satko said she was expecting her eighth child "any day now."

Juneau turned out last night to welcome the 49-year-old, unemployed welder and his family.

They were in good spirits as they ended their journey, a journey which mariners at Seattle had predicted would end in disaster the first time the ark ran into a squall.

FUNERAL SUNDAY

Rites for Mrs. Belle Bonar to Be Held at Bellville.

BELLVILLE—Mrs. Belle Bonar widow of M. L. Bonar, former residents of Bellville died at her home in Indianapolis, Ind. Friday according to word received here today.

The body is to be brought to Bellville Sunday. Funeral services will be held at 4 p. m. Sunday at the A. A. Shafer funeral home. Burial will be in Bellville cemetery Monday.

STEEL RATE

Youngstown Operations Remain At 85 Per Cent.

YOUNGSTOWN, (AP)—Despite receipt of several large contracts for natural deposit plate, steel operations in the Youngstown district will remain at approximately 85 per cent of capacity next week, Vance Sailer, district manager, said today.

Largest of the defense contracts was $5,000,000 for gun carriages to the Aetna-Standard Engineering company. The company will build a $500,000 plant addition.

DIES AT AGE 60

Levi Ritter, [illegible] of Richland county, died Friday at the Richland county home following a lingering illness.

Born near Lexington Aug. 11, 1879, Mr. Ritter spent his entire life in this vicinity. He is survived by a brother, John Ritter of Lexington.

The body was removed to the Wappner funeral home where services will be held at 10 a. m. Monday. Burial will be in Lexington cemetery.

Gang Guns Blaze In Chicago Bookie War

Safety Town, the miniature city where children of pre-school age are taught their traffic ABC's under the direction of the city recreation department will stage a homecoming at Prospect park next week. The toy town opens Monday for a two-week stay on the playlot where the experiment was started just three years ago by Patrolman Frend C. Boals. Classes in safety education will be held daily from 9 to 11 a. m.

August 16 was announced this week by officials of Johns park as date of the park's 20th annual watermelon festival, and along with the date announcement, officials also placed their order for melons to be sold that night. According to Ed Wyllie, chairman of the entertainment committee, the association will have 225 Indiana melons for the occasion.

This morning when young Billy Schettler announced to his parents that a woman friend whom they had visited last night had fallen and hurt herself while they were there, his father, Attorney H. H. Schettler, tried to convince his son that no such thing had happened, but that he had probably dreamed it. But Billy held his ground. "No, sir, she fell, I saw her." A little while later the friend called to say that she was suffering with a torn ligament which she had received when she fell last night just after they had left the house. Billy, looking back out of the car window, had seen her fall as she re-entered the house, but had said nothing about it until this morning.

BOLT STRIKES

2,000 Barrels of Oil in Tank Hit By Lightning.

LIMA — (INS) — Fire, started when lightning struck a huge 30,000-barrel oil tank of the Standard Oil refinery company in Lima, has virtually burned itself out, company officials said today.

Only 2,000 barrels of oil were in the tank at the time the bolt struck. Part of this was pumped off from the bottom of the tank, leaving the oil on the surface to burn itself out. Unofficial estimates placed the loss at $10,000.

Firemen and company employes were kept on duty all night to guard against spread of the blaze to any of the scores of tanks in the same field. Smoke billowed over south Lima and flames shot 50 feet in the air while the blaze was at its height.

SPECIAL BOARD ON BEAUTY PAY

Strain Indicates Committee Will Study Problem.

COLUMBUS—(UP)—State Director of Industrial Relations George A. Strain indicated today that recommendations for a $16 weekly minimum wage for Ohio beauty operators will be re-submitted to a special wage board for further consideration.

A public hearing on the recommendations was recessed today for the week-end and will be resumed Monday when Strain expected to conclude it.

Chief objections raised at the first two days of the hearing were that the recommendations did not differentiate between large and small cities, that a full week's pay is required if the operator works three days or more and that beauty school students must be paid the minimum wage if they charge for their services.

FORMER CAPONE MOB BLAMED IN SHOTGUN BLAST

One Killed, Another Wounded While Taking Groceries To Their Hideout.

(By United Press)

CHICAGO—Gang warfare allegedly involving members of the syndicate once headed by Scarface Al Capone who sought control of "bootleg" horse race conformation services was blamed by police today for the shooting of two men who were believed to be fleeing to a hide-out.

John (Irish) McLeod, 41, one of the wounded men, died last night. James Ryan, 41, was reported in critical condition with wounds in his shoulder and back.

They were shot down in gangland fashion late yesterday by gunmen who poked shotguns into the automobile into which they had loaded $10 worth of canned groceries.

Police Captain John Ryan said he believed that the shooting resulted from efforts of the former gangsters to gain control of independent "bootleg" handbook services which sprang up after Moses L. Annenberg, Philadelphia publisher, dissolved his nationwide news service last November. Nationwide was disbanded after Annenberg and the corporation were indicted by the federal government on charges that the service was a lottery. Annenberg now is serving a three-year prison sentence for evasion of income taxes.

A card identifying him as "an authorized representative of Nationwide News Service" was found in Ryan's pockets. Police Sergeant Frank Donahue said that McLeod had been arrested six months ago by state's attorney's police as an employe of a handbook.

Not That It Matters

British Naive About Those Planes, So Are We About Compulsory Military Drill

—By JANE WILLIAMS

THE other day when the German Reichsfuehrer asserted in his speech that the United States had made promises to France and England which had led them on, promises which we couldn't possibly keep, there was widespread indignation over here.

This week that same assertion was reiterated by columnists and commentators on this side of the Atlantic after Lord Beaverbrook announced to the sorely tried and beleaguered English people that the United States would immediately approve a production plan to furnish England with 3,000 planes a month "starting immediately." He cited Secretary Morgenthau as his authority.

The United States couldn't furnish England 3,000 planes a month, even if we hired Blackstone The Great, to pull them out of a hat. Industrial experts say our maximum capacity now is 600 a month, and it will be a long time before that is increased. And in the meantime there is big talk in Washington of appropriations, contracts, commitments for thousands of planes for ourselves.

All of which leaves the bewildered American populace two guesses:

Either the heads of our government deliberately are building England up for a big let-down, cruelly leading her on to expect aid that we cannot give—

Or, the heads of the English government are doing some wishful thinking out loud in, order to bolster the morale of their people.

In either event the results will be equally unfortunate for us. Because whether they win or lose, the English people themselves will always have a feeling that we cheered them on but fell down on promises of aid. It will make little difference to them in after years whether we actually made the promises or their own leaders just claimed we made them.

IT BEGINS to look as though the latter guess would be more nearly the truth. For William Knudsen, co-ordinator of production in the national defense advisory council, said only today that we couldn't possibly supply Britain with 3,000 planes a month until mid-1942.

They'd be just about in time to participate in that offensive against Germany that Churchill said Britain would launch in 1942.

COMPULSORY military training is just as necessary a part of national defense as tanks, ships and planes. Those naive senators and congressmen who oppose it on the grounds that an army can be recruited by making volunteer enlistments attractive enough, are completely disregarding the guide posts of the past.

When was a sufficient army ever recruited from volunteer enlistments? Even in the days of the violent emotions preceding and during the beginning of the Civil war, when the very life of the nation itself was at stake, Lincoln couldn't recruit enough volunteers to make an army. He couldn't even buy enough men to fight for their country. So he conscripted them.

But in the present attempt to build up an army there seems to be the same general lack of policy that permeates our entire defense program. What IS our defense policy? What are we going to defend? Will it be a naval and air defense, or a land defense? Are we going to defend North America and its islands, or the entire Americas, or the Pacific Island? Do we need a million trained men or five million?

Many a young man who will be taken from his job would like to know the answers to those questions. It isn't because he isn't patriotic, but merely that he would like to know if his sacrifices are going to count for anything.

COLUMNIST Dorothy Thompson is vehement in her demands that American ships be sent to England to bring over the child refugees, so sure is she that Germany would not fire on an American ship loaded with helpless children.

Is Miss Thompson going naive on us after all these years? If the Germans are determined to break down the British morale by any means, why should they collaborate in safeguarding the children? Is there anything in the Hitler record to indicate that decency and humaneness would prevail in this particular case?

Dorothy is such a thoroughly nice person that it's a pity her perpetual emotion so frequently runs away with her judgment.

NEWSPAPER pictures this week show Wendell Willkie and Mrs. Willkie being shown through the "famous Mormon temple" in Salt Lake City.

If he was shown through the Temple, he does indeed have mesmerizing powers that cannot be over-estimated. I doubt if Jehovah himself could get through the Mormon Temple. The big wooden tabernacle, yes; but not the sacred Temple. No non-Mormon has ever gone through the Temple. The Mormons themselves go through it only in year-long stages, progressing from one part of the Temple to another as they work for the church and earn the right.

Even the Mormon workman who went up to the top of the high temple to repair the statue of the angel Moroni was led blindfolded through the various floors. And I just have a hunch that Mr. Willkie had to be content, as you and I, with seeing the round-roof tabernacle.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Bette Davis is pining for her Butternut farm on Sugar Hill. She wants to get away, for a while, from the studios and River Bottom, her new home in Glendale.

She's finishing "The Letter" and she has a touch of flu. She feels low. She's carrying on, resting in her little dressing room on the set between scenes. The room is kept at hot-house temperature by an electric heater, and Bette wears a knitted shawl over her movie costume.

But Bette, even feeling low, is not the pale and wan type. She shows more life than some of her contemporaries do when they've just had their optics lifted and five martinis. Bette is in love—with Butternut, on Sugar Hill with Rover Bottom in Glendale.

Butternut is the old farm Bette bought at Franconia, N. H. She went up to Peckett's inn, her last vacation, to spend a week-end. She fell in love with the place, stayed three months, gained weight and bought Butternut.

"It's an old place, small and falling to pieces," she says, "but it's wonderful. I love the country, and the people are marvelous." She giggles, a good Davis giggle which is deeper than a giggle. "I had a letter from Mr. Peckett. He tells me there's been a lot of blabbing in the papers about a movie actress who bought a place there—almost as much excitement as over the annual question whether Chief Justice Hughes will spend his vacation there."

Bette gets serious, however, when she speaks of her future at Butternut. "It'll be five years at least before I can go to live there the year 'round, and I'm looking forward to it. Those people know how to live. They have more real fun on a picnic than we have in a night club. I could enjoy housework back there. And speaking from a very practical point of view, the best thing about my place is that I can keep it up, food and all, for a total cost of $10 a week."

Bette goes to Butternut immediately after "The Letter," and she isn't sure that she'll do "Calamity Jane" on her return. It depends on how the script shapes up.

"Calamity was a fascinating woman, apart from all her shooting and riding," she says, "and if they soft-pedal the two-gun stuff I want very much to play her. You know how frightened I am of guns, so it was a laugh when they mentioned the role for me. If it's a part that calls for much riding and shooting, I don't want it—I'd wind up with all my bones in a sling. But I'm going to do a lot of riding this vacation so that if I do have to ride I won't walk around the lot bow-legged and stiff."

She'll have chances, close to home, to practice horsemanship. Her Glendale home—christened River Bottom by her mother because [illegible] it, near the usually dry Los Angeles river and her studio—is close to several riding stables.

GERMANS SAY FOUR BRITISH SHIPS BAGGED

Nazis Stage Speedboat Raid; Also Claim Successes For Undersea Craft.

landing bluejackets, under cover of naval bombardment, 70 miles northeast of the British crown colony of Hongkong. It was one of many Japanese naval and military moves to blockade the China coast all the way south of Shanghai.

The 21 American republics, through a compromise program designed to meet Argentina's objections, were confidently expected today to draft a plan for "collective trusteeship" of European-held possessions in the western hemisphere.

Concerned over the future status of British, French and Dutch colonies in this hemisphere, the Havana conference was told indirectly last night that Germany has no designs on Netherlands colonial possessions.

This statement was made by the Nazi commissioner for the Netherlands, Arthur Seysz-Inquart, who told a gathering of German residents of The Hague that Germany also has no intention of changing the Netherlands' status as an independent nation. Declaring that "the political will of the country is the affair of the Dutch," Seysz-Inquart then warned the Dutch that, while ultimately they themselves would have to decide the fate of their queen, there could be no acclaim or political mention of Wilhelmina during the Nazi occupation.

Britain, meanwhile, apparently in reprisal for Rumania seizure of British oil properties and expulsion of British oilmen, seized three Rumanian ships at Port Said—one of them a loaded freighter owned by the Rumania state maritime service, the others oil tankers.

On the far-flung battle front, aerial operations were dominant. Gibraltar was bombed twice yesterday, once before dawn and again late at night, by Italian planes which, according to Rome, started numerous fires and caused panic among troops and civilians.

Reports from La Linea, Spain, said four were killed and 37 injured in the morning raid. It was believed the second attack caused further casualties. The British denied there had been any.

Britain herself, acknowledging shipping losses in German aerial attacks yesterday, reported "some enemy activity" during the night in which one person was said to have been killed and one German bombing plane brought down.

Report Full-Scale Attack Planned

LONDON —(INS)— Following a long debate with Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering has now agreed to launch a full-scale attack on England in the middle of August, Reuter's (British) news agency reported in a dispatch from Ankara today.

The agency declared that alleged differences of opinion among members of Hitler's general staff, frequently reported in the past, have now been smoothed over.

Hitler and his aides recognize, Reuter's declared, that the attack will be a costly one. Tremendous German casualties are anticipated, the agency said.

"Hospitals are being prepared in Western Germany for care of the wounded," Reuters said, "and doctors and nurses are being drafted from Italy."

Malta Bombed By Italian Warplanes

ROME — (INS) — Italian warplanes subjected the British Mediterranean naval base at Malta to a violent bombing attack during the night, an official communique announced today.

Two British Gloster planes were shot down in northern Africa, the communique said.

Italians Report Capturing Curmuk

ROME — (AP) — The capture of Curmuk, British fortified town on the frontier between Ethiopia and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, was reported today by the East African war correspondent of the newspaper Il Giornale D'Italia.

The dispatch said occupation of the frontier post, which has not yet been announced officially, was carried out by Italian Askaris.—native Ethiopian troops—after a brief early morning attack by bombing planes.

The air assault was said to have destroyed the fort, blown up munitions dumps and set fire to the radio station.

STOVE OFFICIAL TELLS UTILITY EXECUTIVES HOW TO SPUR SALES

Nation-wide advertising, research, promotion and a year-around effort are the keys that will open the doors to more sales of gas-using products, Alan Tappan, vice president of the Tappan Stove company, told a gathering of Ohio Fuel Gas company representatives here yesterday afternoon.

Tappan spoke at Westbrook Country club at a district meeting of the utility's executives.

He said that in the four years between 1935 and 1939, the Tappan company has increased its sales volume by 32 per cent, and had increased the number of employes from 300 to 800.

Enlarging on advertising as a help to sales, Tappan said that in Mansfield alone, dealers in electrical stoves and refrigerators had used nearly three times as much advertising as gas appliance dealers in a six-month period.

Yesterday afternoon's session brought to a close a two-day session, at which the visitors heard a series of talks by company officials and were given a preview of the company's 1941 food show.

Other speakers yesterday afternoon were Dolly S. Deeds, home economist for the Tappan company; O. J. Hagen, Columbus, who talked on a house heating campaign which will be staged in the near future; James Scanlon on rate regulation, and Emil Linek, on unemployment insurance. E. M. Tharp, vice president and general manager of the company, summed up the reports of the meeting at the conclusion of the afternoon session.

Frank Williams, Columbus district manager, presided over the afternoon session, which was preceded by a luncheon at the country club. The visitors were guests of the Tappan Stove company the first day of the meeting. There was golf and tennis on Thursday afternoon and a dinner in the club house that night.

Observers Report Holdout of Lone Republic About to Come to Close.

striving for unanimous agreement without sacrificing vital objectives in the United States suggestion of "collective trusteeship" over the European colonies, called his peace sub-committee into session to resume efforts to satisfy Argentine objections.

The basic problem was Argentina's reluctance to enter any broad commitments on measures to meet possible emergencies. The southern nation apparently was unwilling to take action which might prejudice her future trade relations with Europe.

On the other hand, the United States and most of the other republics evinced a strong desire to create machinery for quick and decisive action to meet any foreign threat involving control of French, Dutch or British possessions in the new world. The United States advocates the trusteeship for any colony threatened with transfer.

While the course of discussions was a guarded secret, there were indications that a three-point plan had been worked out by the peace sub-committee, calling for:

1. A general declaration expressing the republics' concern over the future status of foreign possessions and their determination to defend this hemisphere.

2. Temporary machinery to deal with attempts to transfer sovereignty or control of these possessions to other non-American states or to acquire political domination by other methods.

3. An agreement embodying the "collective trusteeship" principle—joint American control if any nation found it necessary to adopt preventive measures in the European colonies.

Japan Perturbed Over Possible American Embargo

WAR SUPPLIES NECESSARY IN CHINESE FIGHT

Roosevelt Insists Control Designed to Conserve Defense Resources.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—United States foreign policy, particularly in the Far East, followed a baffling course today that kept Japan guessing as to whether she will get the American aviation gasoline, tetraethyl lead and iron and steel scrap she needs to keep her war in China going.

Japanese circles here were more perturbed over President Roosevelt's order placing those products under export license control, when they learned that the government had permitted a Russian firm to charter an American oil tanker for a trans-Pacific voyage.

Mr. Roosevelt insisted that the licensing control was not an embargo and that it was designed principally to conserve vital resources for American defense.

He reiterated that contention in a proclamation and order specifying the materials which will be affected when the control becomes effective on Aug. 1.

The proclamation specified that the licenses would have to be obtained to export high octane gasolines of various descriptions, aviation lubricating oil, tetraethyl lead, (used in manufacturing anti-knock gasoline) and No. 1 heavy melting iron and steel scrap.

Japanese circles, in expressing concern over the restrictions, pointed out that in addition to large purchases of scrap metal for war industries, their country also uses considerable quantities of American aviation gasoline.

Japan probably will test the new regulations as soon as they become effective, by applying for export licenses. If they are refused or limited, she could then decide that they constitute an embargo. Japan has threatened reprisals if an embargo is enforced.

The treasury and the maritime commission have prevented the chartering of American ships to carry oil to Spain, giving rise to British hopes that this nation may be contemplating an embargo which would prevent any American oil seeping through to Germany.

Juneau turned out last night to welcome the 49-year-old, unemployed welder and his family.

This morning when young Billy Schettler announced to his parents that a woman friend whom they had visited last night had fallen and hurt herself while they were there, his father, Attorney H. H. Schettler, tried to convince his son that no such thing had happened, but that he had probably dreamed it. But Billy held his ground. "No, sir, she fell, I saw her." A little while later the friend called to say that she was suffering with a torn ligament which she had received when she fell last night just after they had left the house. ## BOLT STRIKES

2,000 Barrels of Oil in Tank Hit By Lightning.

LIMA — (INS) — Fire, started when lightning struck a huge 30,000-barrel oil tank of the Standard Oil refinery company in Lima, has virtually burned itself out, company officials said today.

Only 2,000 barrels of oil were in the tank at the time the bolt struck. Part of this was pumped off from the bottom of the tank, leaving the oil on the surface to burn itself out. Unofficial estimates placed the loss at $10,000.

A public hearing on the recommendations was recessed today for the week-end and will be resumed Monday when Strain expected to conclude it.

Chief objections raised at the first two days of the hearing were that the recommendations did not differentiate between large and small cities, that a full week's pay is required if the operator works three days or more and that beauty school students must be paid the minimum wage if they charge for their services.

FORMER CAPONE MOB BLAMED IN SHOTGUN BLAST

One Killed, Another Wounded While Taking Groceries To Their Hideout.

(By United Press)

CHICAGO—Gang warfare allegedly involving members of the syndicate once headed by Scarface Al Capone who sought control of "bootleg" horse race conformation services was blamed by police today for the shooting of two men who were believed to be fleeing to a hide-out.

John (Irish) McLeod, 41, one of the wounded men, died last night. James Ryan, 41, was reported in critical condition with wounds in his shoulder and back.

They were shot down in gangland fashion late yesterday by gunmen who poked shotguns into the automobile into which they had loaded $10 worth of canned groceries.

Police Captain John Ryan said he believed that the shooting resulted from efforts of the former gangsters to gain control of independent "bootleg" handbook services which sprang up after Moses L. Annenberg, Philadelphia publisher, dissolved his nationwide news service last November. Nationwide was disbanded after Annenberg and the corporation were indicted by the federal government on charges that the service was a lottery. Annenberg now is serving a three-year prison sentence for evasion of income taxes.

A card identifying him as "an authorized representative of Nationwide News Service" was found in Ryan's pockets. Police Sergeant Frank Donahue said that McLeod had been arrested six months ago by state's attorney's police as an employe of a handbook.

Not That It Matters

British Naive About Those Planes, So Are We About Compulsory Military Drill

—By JANE WILLIAMS

THE other day when the German Reichsfuehrer asserted in his speech that the United States had made promises to France and England which had led them on, promises which we couldn't possibly keep, there was widespread indignation over here.

This week that same assertion was reiterated by columnists and commentators on this side of the Atlantic after Lord Beaverbrook announced to the sorely tried and beleaguered English people that the United States would immediately approve a production plan to furnish England with 3,000 planes a month "starting immediately." He cited Secretary Morgenthau as his authority.

The United States couldn't furnish England 3,000 planes a month, even if we hired Blackstone The Great, to pull them out of a hat. Industrial experts say our maximum capacity now is 600 a month, and it will be a long time before that is increased. And in the meantime there is big talk in Washington of appropriations, contracts, commitments for thousands of planes for ourselves.

All of which leaves the bewildered American populace two guesses:

Either the heads of our government deliberately are building England up for a big let-down, cruelly leading her on to expect aid that we cannot give—

Or, the heads of the English government are doing some wishful thinking out loud in, order to bolster the morale of their people.

In either event the results will be equally unfortunate for us. Because whether they win or lose, the English people themselves will always have a feeling that we cheered them on but fell down on promises of aid. It will make little difference to them in after years whether we actually made the promises or their own leaders just claimed we made them.

IT BEGINS to look as though the latter guess would be more nearly the truth. For William Knudsen, co-ordinator of production in the national defense advisory council, said only today that we couldn't possibly supply Britain with 3,000 planes a month until mid-1942.

They'd be just about in time to participate in that offensive against Germany that Churchill said Britain would launch in 1942.

COMPULSORY military training is just as necessary a part of national defense as tanks, ships and planes. Those naive senators and congressmen who oppose it on the grounds that an army can be recruited by making volunteer enlistments attractive enough, are completely disregarding the guide posts of the past.

When was a sufficient army ever recruited from volunteer enlistments? Even in the days of the violent emotions preceding and during the beginning of the Civil war, when the very life of the nation itself was at stake, Lincoln couldn't recruit enough volunteers to make an army. He couldn't even buy enough men to fight for their country. So he conscripted them.

But in the present attempt to build up an army there seems to be the same general lack of policy that permeates our entire defense program. What IS our defense policy? What are we going to defend? Will it be a naval and air defense, or a land defense? Are we going to defend North America and its islands, or the entire Americas, or the Pacific Island? Do we need a million trained men or five million?

Many a young man who will be taken from his job would like to know the answers to those questions. It isn't because he isn't patriotic, but merely that he would like to know if his sacrifices are going to count for anything.

COLUMNIST Dorothy Thompson is vehement in her demands that American ships be sent to England to bring over the child refugees, so sure is she that Germany would not fire on an American ship loaded with helpless children.

Is Miss Thompson going naive on us after all these years? If the Germans are determined to break down the British morale by any means, why should they collaborate in safeguarding the children? Is there anything in the Hitler record to indicate that decency and humaneness would prevail in this particular case?

Dorothy is such a thoroughly nice person that it's a pity her perpetual emotion so frequently runs away with her judgment.

NEWSPAPER pictures this week show Wendell Willkie and Mrs. Willkie being shown through the "famous Mormon temple" in Salt Lake City.

If he was shown through the Temple, he does indeed have mesmerizing powers that cannot be over-estimated. I doubt if Jehovah himself could get through the Mormon Temple. The big wooden tabernacle, yes; but not the sacred Temple. No non-Mormon has ever gone through the Temple. The Mormons themselves go through it only in year-long stages, progressing from one part of the Temple to another as they work for the church and earn the right.

Even the Mormon workman who went up to the top of the high temple to repair the statue of the angel Moroni was led blindfolded through the various floors. And I just have a hunch that Mr. Willkie had to be content, as you and I, with seeing the round-roof tabernacle.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Bette Davis is pining for her Butternut farm on Sugar Hill. She wants to get away, for a while, from the studios and River Bottom, her new home in Glendale.

She's finishing "The Letter" and she has a touch of flu. She feels low. She's carrying on, resting in her little dressing room on the set between scenes. The room is kept at hot-house temperature by an electric heater, and Bette wears a knitted shawl over her movie costume.

But Bette, even feeling low, is not the pale and wan type. She shows more life than some of her contemporaries do when they've just had their options lifted and five martinis. Bette is in love—with Butternut, on Sugar Hill with Rover Bottom in Glendale.

Butternut is the old farm Bette bought at Franconia, N. H. She went up to Peckett's Inn, her last vacation, to spend a week-end. She fell in love with the place, stayed three months, gained weight and bought Butternut.

"It's an old place, small and falling to pieces," she says, "but it's wonderful. I love the country, and the people are marvelous." She giggles, a good Davis giggle which is deeper than a giggle. "I had a letter from Mr. Peckett. He tells me there's been a lot of blabbing in the papers about a movie actress who bought a place there—almost as much excitement as over the annual question whether Chief Justice Hughes will spend his vacation there."

Bette gets serious however when she discusses her future at Butternut. "It'll be five years at least before I can go to live there the year 'round, and I'm looking forward to it. Those people know how to live. They have more real fun on a picnic than we have in a night club. I could enjoy housework back there. And speaking from a very practical point of view, the best thing about my place is that I can keep it up, food and all, for a total cost of $10 a week."

Bette goes to Butternut immediately after "The Letter," and she isn't sure that she'll do "Calamity Jane" on her return. It depends on how the script shapes up.

"Calamity was a fascinating woman, apart from all her shooting and riding," she says, "and if they soft-pedal the two-gun stuff I want very much to play her. You know how frightened I am of guns, so it was a laugh when they mentioned the role for me. If it's a part that calls for much riding and shooting, I don't want it—I'd wind up with all my bones in a sling. But I'm going to do a lot of riding this vacation so that if I do have to ride I won't walk around the lot bow-legged and stiff."

She'll have chances, close to home, to practice horsemanship. Her Glendale home—christened River Bottom by her mother because that's what it is, near the usually dry Los Angeles river and her studio—is close to several riding stables.

GERMANS SAY FOUR BRITISH SHIPS BAGGED

Nazis Stage Speedboat Raid; Also Claim Successes For Undersea Craft.

landing bluejackets, under cover of naval bombardment, 70 miles northeast of the British crown colony of Hongkong. It was one of many Japanese naval and military moves to blockade the China coast all the way south of Shanghai.

The 21 American republics, through a compromise program designed to meet Argentina's objections, were confidently expected today to draft a plan for "collective trusteeship" of European-held possessions in the western hemisphere.

Concerned over the future status of British, French and Dutch colonies in this hemisphere, the Havana conference was told indirectly last night that Germany has no designs on Netherlands colonial possessions.

This statement was made by the Nazi commissioner for the Netherlands, Arthur Seysz-Inquart, who told a gathering of German residents of The Hague that Germany also has no intention of changing the Netherlands' status as an independent nation. Declaring that "the political will of the country is the affair of the Dutch," Seysz-Inquart then warned the Dutch that, while ultimately they themselves would have to decide the fate of their queen, there could be no acclaim or political mention of Wilhelmina during the Nazi occupation.

Britain, meanwhile, apparently in reprisal for Rumania seizure of British oil properties and expulsion of British oilmen, seized three Rumanian ships at Port Said—one of them a loaded freighter owned by the Rumania state maritime service, the others oil tankers.

On the far-flung battle front, aerial operations were dominant. Gibraltar was bombed twice yesterday, once before dawn and again late at night, by Italian planes which, according to Rome, started numerous fires and caused panic among troops and civilians.

Reports from La Linea, Spain, said four were killed and 37 injured in the morning raid. It was believed the second attack caused further casualties. The British denied there had been any.

Britain herself, acknowledging shipping losses in German aerial attacks yesterday, reported "some enemy activity" during the night in which one person was said to have been killed and one German bombing plane brought down.

Report Full-Scale Attack Planned

LONDON —(INS)— Following a long debate with Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering has now agreed to launch a full-scale attack on England in the middle of August, Reuter's (British) news agency reported in a dispatch from Ankara today.

The agency declared that alleged differences of opinion among members of Hitler's general staff, frequently reported in the past, have now been smoothed over.

Hitler and his aides recognize, Reuter's declared, that the attack will be a costly one. Tremendous German casualties are anticipated, the agency said.

"Hospitals are being prepared in Western Germany for care of the wounded," Reuters said, "and doctors and nurses are being drafted from Italy."

Malta Bombed By Italian Warplanes

ROME — (INS) — Italian warplanes subjected the British Mediterranean naval base at Malta to a violent bombing attack during the night, an official communique announced today.

Two British Gloster planes were shot down in northern Africa, the communique said.

Italians Report Capturing Curmuk

ROME — (AP) — The capture of Curmuk, British fortified town on the frontier between Ethiopia and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, was reported today by the East African war correspondent of the newspaper Il Giornale D'Italia.

The dispatch said occupation of the frontier post, which has not yet been announced officially, was carried out by Italian Askaris,—native Ethiopian troops—after a brief early morning attack by bombing planes.

The air assault was said to have destroyed the fort, blown up munitions dumps and set fire to the radio station.

Shown in the top photo are part of the some 100 district managers, sales managers and home economists of the Ohio Fuel Gas company as they attended the Friday afternoon session of the two-day meeting here at the Westbrook country club, which was addressed by Alan Tappan, vice-president of the Tappan Stove company who was host for the first day's sessions. Tappan is shown in the bottom photo as he addressed the group of officials. Seated is Miss Marian Dittmar of Columbus, who was official secretary for the two-day meeting.

STOVE OFFICIAL TELLS UTILITY EXECUTIVES HOW TO SPUR SALES

Nation-wide advertising, research, promotion and a year-around effort are the keys that will open the doors to more sales of gas-using products, Alan Tappan, vice president of the Tappan Stove company, told a gathering of Ohio Fuel Gas company representatives here yesterday afternoon.

Tappan spoke at Westbrook Country club at a district meeting of the utility's executives.

He said that in the four years between 1935 and 1939, the Tappan company has increased its sales volume by 32 per cent, and had increased the number of employes from 300 to 800.

Enlarging on advertising as a help to sales, Tappan said that in Mansfield alone, dealers in electrical stoves and refrigerators had used nearly three times as much advertising as gas appliance dealers in a six-month period.

Yesterday afternoon's session brought to a close a two-day session, at which the visitors heard a series of talks by company officials and were given a preview of the company's 1941 food show.

Other speakers yesterday afternoon were Dolly S. Deeds, home economist for the Tappan company; O. J. Hagen, Columbus, who talked on a house heating campaign which will be staged in the near future; James Scanlon on rate regulation, and Emil Linck, on unemployment insurance. E. M. Tharp, vice president and general manager of the company, summed up the reports of the meeting at the conclusion of the afternoon session.

Frank Williams, Columbus district manager, presided over the afternoon session, which was preceded by a luncheon at the country club. The visitors were guests of the Tappan Stove company the first day of the meeting. There was golf and tennis on Thursday afternoon and a dinner in the club house that night.

GOLDSBORO, N. C. — (AP) — When Levi Hamilton, colored undertaker, advertised a free barbecue for "elderly parents" he prepared for the event by barbecuing 12 pigs, purchasing 125 pounds of corn bread, 125 pounds of slaw and 625 paper plates.

A thousand persons turned out for the affair and 375 ate barbecue on paper napkins.

Observers Report Holdout of Lone Republic About to Come to Close.

striving for unanimous agreement without sacrificing vital objectives in the United States suggestion of "collective trusteeship" over the European colonies, called his peace sub-committee into session to resume efforts to satisfy Argentine objections.

The basic problem was Argentina's reluctance to enter any broad commitments on measures to meet possible emergencies. The southern nation apparently was unwilling to take action which might prejudice her future trade relations with Europe.

On the other hand, the United States and most of the other republics evinced a strong desire to create machinery for quick and decisive action to meet any foreign threat involving control of French, Dutch or British possessions in the new world. The United States advocates the trusteeship for any colony threatened with transfer.

While the course of discussions was a guarded secret, there were indications that a three-point plan had been worked out by the peace sub-committee, calling for:

1. A general declaration expressing the republics' concern over the future status of foreign possessions and their determination to defend this hemisphere.

2. Temporary machinery to deal with attempts to transfer sovereignty or control of these possessions to other non-American states or to acquire political domination by other methods.

3. An agreement embodying the "collective trusteeship" principle—joint American control if any nation found it necessary to adopt preventive measures in the European colonies.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, JULY 27, 1940.

Drive carefully tomorrow—and warn the children not to drive after drinking.

That old-time success formula that involved hard work has been discarded by too many people.

As revised by Jack Warwick in the Toledo Blade: "You can fool some of the people all of the time, and all of the people some of the time, but you can't fool all of the people a third time."

Mansfield Short On Speed Signs

MANSFIELD is one of the few cities of its size which attempts to exercise traffic control and enforce speed limits without displaying suitable signs to acquaint local and transient motorists with legal speed in various parts of the city.

Except for a few signs at corporation bounds on state or federal highways entering Mansfield, indicating 35 miles an hour as the maximum, there is total absence of signs to warn that 20 miles an hour is the permitted speed through business districts, and 25 miles an hour on residence streets other than those which are a part of state or federal highways.

While it may be assumed that all motorists should know that 35 miles an hour is the top speed lawful in any part of the city, it is quite common in practically all cities in Ohio and other states to display warning signs conspicuously, indicating requirement for reduction of speed during progress toward business sections.

Probably due to lack of such signs, coupled with non-enforcement, the 25-mile speed limit on a majority of Mansfield residence streets is almost entirely ignored, whereas Detroit has found it advisable to reduce its speed limit to 25 miles an hour throughout the city, except for the further reduction in business districts.

In addition to more dependable enforcement, voluntary observance of speed limits and other safety regulations will be an important factor in improving traffic conditions in Mansfield. Signs designating maximum lawful speed on various streets will aid materially in this accomplishment.

Shift of Population Probable

HOWEVER the European war may result militarily, it will probably produce a great shift in population, especially in the British Empire.

Canada has been somewhat disappointed lately by a let-up in the arrival of English children, but it will doubtless be resumed. Our neighbor is still a pioneer country, especially in the west and north, and could accommodate many millions of newcomers to her own advantage. The war refugees are assumed to be only transient guests, but large numbers of them will doubtless want to remain when the war is over, no matter how it turns out.

If Britain should be seriously defeated, and the historic British Isles made untenable as a permanent seat of government and home for the English people, there would naturally be a big emigration. And Canada would be the chief beneficiary, although there would also be new waves of settlers moving to Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and lesser possessions.

Except for sentimental attachment to the historic homeland of the English race, this might not be a bad thing. Obviously the traditional security of England is gone, and so are her bonds with the European continent. And migrations generally result in new racial vigor. Thus England might be reborn abroad in new strength.

Vacationers Can Travel Far

NOT only are more workers receiving vacations with pay these days, but those with even short vacations find their travel range greatly extended.

By a combination of travel facilities even a week-end jaunt may carry the vacationer a thousand miles from home. For example, the midwesterner may fly to Boston, take a boat from there to the tip of Cape Cod, and then fly home again, having enjoyed a short sea trip and a lot of new sights and scenes in 36 hours.

A map and a few travel folders and transportations schedules furnish material for a grand game of planning extended trips for limited periods. Whether a person wants to be strenuous or quiet, to do a lot of sightseeing, or to loaf around on a beach, or spend a day where he can inhale the fragrance of pines, he can find a way to cut down the time ordinarily spent getting there and back.

It takes money, of course, but the cost will grow less as facilities are expended and use of them increases.

Beware of the Botulinus Germ

THE botulinus germ is a bad bug that glides into canned meat and vegetables and jumps out at a family with devastating illness when the can is opened. There are exceptions to all rules, and many farm housewives have canned safely all their lives. But speaking in general terms, the foods canned with sugar are safe for everybody to put up—the foods which call for salt and high temperatures are not.

Fill your cellars with the glowing jewels of the fruits, ladies—crimson and amber and purples of berries and peaches and grapes. The crabapple jelly so lovely to look upon, so good for the children in the winter, the spiced peaches for high holidays, the homely plain canned ones for weekday suppers, the luscious plums, and—if you have time and patience—the good old brown apple butter—these are ready to your hand.

But unless you know how to do it without taking your family's life in your hands, buy yourself a really good can-opener and let the canners who supply the canned meat and vegetables do the rest.

Looking Toward Final Battle

"YOU have just one more battle to win—then bells of peace will ring," said Goebbels to German soldiers returning from the conquest of France.

Maybe so. Britain, they say, doesn't care much about the early victories of a war—what she's interested in is the last one.

Napoleon thought he had only one more, too. He did. It was Waterloo.

A student of history finds that four rulers of Germany died in the fortieth year of their respective centuries. Frederick I died in 1440, George William in 1640, Frederick William I in 1740, and Frederick III in 1840. And here it's 1940 and the world is waiting.

AN UNWELCOME INTERRUPTION

Unknown Quantities In Campaign

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON — President Roosevelt's scrapping—before the ink was dry—of the war issue plank in the Democratic platform he himself had dictated, clears the way for a campaign on purely domestic issues. The purpose of the weasel words—to prevent Burt Wheeler and Champ Clark from starting a third party—had been accomplished.

Now the president stands on his record, just a little bit more belligerent toward Germany and Japan than Willkie, agreeing with him precisely on all possible legal aid to Britain, and four-square with the Republican nominee on increasing our national defense to the utmost.

This does not mean there will be no discussion of keeping us out of war. The convention oratory set the style for that, and power does not exist to restrain campaign orators from solemn promises that "only our leader" can be trusted to keep our boys out of the hell of European battlefields.

Assuming, of course, that the war is still in progress as the campaign proceeds, for it must be remembered in any appraisal of the political situation that Hitler and Churchill can change the course of American political history overnight almost any week end from now until Nov. 5, when the voters get their chance.

AS A MATTER of fact, you can ignore both platforms now that this quadrennial word-juggling contest has been concluded by the two major parties. Neither of them means anything. Never did, save as some orator sought to make an obscure point by quotation.

For instance, the bolting of the Democratic party down in Louisiana by lifelong Democrats was not done because of their dissatisfaction with any words in the platform. Itwas done because they KNEW Henry Wallace's views about sugar, and they didn't like them.

The lines of the campaign on domestic issues will be fairly simple. Willkie will insist that the present administration has demonstrated its inefficiency and extravagance, and hence cannot be trusted to produce the taxpayers' money's worth in spending billions on the army and navy. He will NOT attack the "social advances" and New Deal objectives for the benefit of the underdogs but insist that their administration should be intelligent, and particularly that there should not be barn burnings to get rid of rats.

Roosevelt and the New Dealers will harp on their accomplishments in social reform, and insist that to turn the government over to the "interests" would mean to wreck them. They will say that whatever Willkie's personal views, he will be as helpless as Harding and Hoover to prevent sordid Wall Street-controlled throttleing of the little business man, the consumers, and all the rest of it.

And they will ring the changes on the notion of a Wall Street utility holding company executive in the White House.

THE two most important unknown quantities in this campaign, always leaving out the possible doings of Hitler, are: (1) Whether the people of strategically important states will resent the so-called shattering of our traditions by the third-term try, and (2) whether the voters of those same states can be persuaded that the things they do not like about holding companies, electric bills, and the stock swindles of the '20's are embodied in Wendell Willkie. No one knows the answers now.

If both of them work in Willkie's favor, he can be elected. If both work against him, he will be crushingly defeated.

Don't Sugar-Coat Your Yesterdays!

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

DR. EUGENE DE SAVITSCH has lived fifteen lives packed into one. Lives as separate and distinct as though he had been born again each time. Each with its full quota of dreams and danger, loss and labor, shock, grief and partial success.

Born in a well-to-do White Russian family, his boyhood was spent under the old regime. With the Revolution he became progressively, a penniless refugee in Yokohama . . . a bookkeeper . . . a salesman . . . a member of the White Army execution squad in Siberia . . . an actor . . . a clerk . . . a sugar warehouse worker in California . . . an inmate of a tuberculosis sanitarium . . . a medical student . . . a research worker . . . a blood donator . . . a scientific explorer collecting diseased brains in Africa . . . and finally an established Washington, D. C., surgeon.

"How exciting!" you say. "I'd like to live like that!"

But would you? Could you? Can you do, even with your one life, what he did with his fifteen? For remember, fifteen lives don't "just happen." You must make them happen. You must be willing to put dead life behind you and step forward into the new one . . . to forget your yesterdays and throw yourself into today.

"What's hard about that?" you say. "We all have to do it."

You're wrong. Not one in a million do it. The hardest feat our weak human nature can face is to forget and free ourselves from our yesterdays.

It is said of Dr. Eugene de Savitsch by a reviewer of his book that he earned his new opportunities by "his willingness to break with a dead past and his refusal to romanticize it." Than which there is no tougher job on earth. For the past holds us with bonds stouter than steel . . . bonds of resentment and regret . . . longing for lost delight . . . craving for our childhood's ease and security.

It's a million times easier to drift in memories than to tackle today's realities.

Today is a lonely business and a dangerous one. It's filled with risk and hard work, challenge and criticism from which our laziness and egotism are bound to shrink. Remember the old verse:

"We're curious critters -
"Now is never the minute
"That fits us just exactly
"While we're in it—
"Long as it's Future
"It is perfect bliss;
"Soon as it's Past
"'Tis worth ten times o' this."

Actually, Yesterday was no safer or easier, and rarely happier than Today. It, too, held peril and drudgery, anger, confusion and disappointment. But, looking back, these handicaps are apt to disappear. We put away the humiliating facts and remember only the flattering ones—how stunning we looked as "Gibson Girls," how thrilled we were when we made The Team. In short, we "romanticize" the Past and seek escape in its rosy memories.

But the man who would lead a full life must not seek escape . . . must not let himself be bound by vain regrets or longings.

DUTIES MUST BE MET, WHATEVER THEIR DATING. BUT DO NOT LOOK BACK WHEN THE TRAIL POINTS FORWARD, LEST, LIKE LOT'S WIFE, YOU TURN INTO A STERILE "PILLAR OF SALT."

How do I know? Because looking-back is my own favorite dish and most futile pastime. And has brought me nothing but grief!

Summary of Week's Happenings

Ponder Pan-American Problems; Nazi Bombers Harass Britain

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

SAID Secretary Hull: "Our nations must not blind themselves . . . regarding the possibility of attack. . . ."

Said Leopoldo Melo of Argentina (in effect): "Let's not holler till we're hurt."

The secretary, delegate to the Inter-American conference at Havana, presented U. S. plans for safeguarding the western hemisphere against military or economic threats from Europe.

As the conference developed, economic discussions got much more attention than military talks.

Melo warned against hurrying into any plan based on a "conjectural hypothesis." Other Latin delegates generally supported Hull. The big question hanging over the conference was whether the other 20 republics would go ahead with plans for Pan-American cooperation even if traditionally leery Argentenians refused to take part.

Hull okayed the plan for 21 American republics to set up a temporary trusteeship over new world European colonies threatened by unfriendly powers. The idea was first set forth by Cuba.

Also, he offered a four-point program involving (1) trade consultations, (2) a joint marketing program for surplus commodities, better known as a cartel, (3) proposals to assure both producers and consumers an even break and, (4) "methods for improving the standard of living of the peoples of the Americas."

Nazis Not In Their Box.

By working together, Hull said, the Americas can "build a system of economic defense that will enable each of them to safeguard itself from the dangers of economic subordination from abroad and of economic distress at home."

Hull obviously was referring to German barter trade methods.

(Argentine livestock and grain men adopted a resolution opposing any cooperative marketing plan as playing into the hands of U. S. producers, "our direct competitors.")

Meanwhile, President Roosevelt asked congress to increase the lending power of the Export-Import bank by $500,000,000 to make it "of greater assistance to our neighbors south of the Rio Grande." This gesture was warmly greeted at Havana.

Several proposals were made for joint protection from fifth column activities in the Americans.

Invasion Awaits Balkan Peace

IT ALMOST causes me pain," a conciliatory Herr Hitler cried "to think I should have been selected by fate to deal the fatal blow to a structure (Britain) which the English statesmen already have sent tottering."

So he appealed once more to England's "common sense." When Britons seemed unimpressed, his spokesmen said the dice were cast. And these were indications that they really were:

(1) Neutral eyewitnesses told of "greatly increased activities" at Dutch and Belgian dockyards and railways. (2) waves of bombers swept over Britain with greater frequency, apparently to "soften" strategic spots before the final onslaught, (3) Germans reported that their troops were now rested from the spring campaigns and were stationed along a continuous front from Norway to Spain. Communiques of both sides were vague concerning damage done by the bombings).

But observers doubted that Hitler would start anything until Balkan peace was assured; and Russia (perhaps as a favor to Britain) persisted in prodding up Balkan furores. She was reported backing Hungarian claims on Rumania and suggesting that Rumania get a "popular" government (Russians denied the latter.)

So Nazi Foreign Minister Ribbentrop went to Salzburg to meet agents from Rumania, Bulgaria and Hungary and to coax them to behave themselves. Earlier, Pro-Nazi Rumania confiscated a large British-Dutch oil company.

French Paper Critical.

France, meanwhile, hustled to become Fascist enough to suit Nazis. The Paris-Soir urged a "bold and total solution of the Jewish problem," but some papers didn't hustle enough. Hitler's own Volkischer Beobachter noted ominously that Le Temps, printed in Vichy, was blaming France's distress on the German occupation.

Britons were given an even higher estimate on the high cost of war this week. Pink-cheeked Chancellor of the Exchequer Wood told them income taxes would be raised to 42½% and that a stiff sales tax on "luxuries" such as furniture soon would be instituted. Back in April, experts had figured the war would cost $8,000,000,000 for the fiscal year. But now that France is gone and invasion looms, the estimate has been upped to $11,000,000,000.

At Home

For the Defense.

To the Democratic convention President Roosevelt said:

"Most right thinking persons are agreed that some form of selection by draft is as necessary and fair today as it was in 1917 and 1918."

This week the Burke-Wadsworth bill, calling for registration of all men between 18 and 64, started rolling through congress. Only men between 21 and 45 years old are liable for active military service under the bill. Others would be used "behind the lines."

A war department official said registration had been set tentatively to start Sept. 1. By Oct. 1, it's expected that 400,000 young men between the age of 21 and 31 will be called into service.

The bill asks for a total of 1,500,000 men to be called up by October, 1941. Married men and men holding jobs important to national defense will be placed on a deferred list.

Con and Pro.

"That quiet invisible thing called conscience will not let me turn my back upon a call to service," explained the president in accepting nomination for a third term. He said he could not forget his responsibility to the thousands of men who may be called upon, before November, to aid in the re-arming effort.

Republican Nominee Willkie, before romping off to a Wild West rodeo, observed that "in this country there is no such thing as the indispensable man."

"My phone hasn't stopped ringing since the Democratic convention," he said, "because of the important Democrats over the country saying they will come out for me."

Dies Data.

Round, pugnacious Rep. Wright Patman suggested a few weeks ago that if the Dies committee was looking for fifth columnists, it might well examine the noted New York publicist, Carl Byoir. Last week-end a Dies lieutenant, Rep. Dempsey, said a probe had exonerated Byoir.

Patman retorted that he, for one, hadn't been asked to testify, and opined that the Dempsey report was a hurried effort to whitewash Byoir. He said he had sworn testimony to prove that Byoir had sent an agent to Germany in 1933 who obtained a contract for him to sell Hitlerism to America.

Backwoods Parachutists.

Heat lightning has started many blazes in the vast forests of Idaho this year. To combat them, the U. S. forest service has organized two-man parachute squads of fire-fighters. The men are dropped by plane near the blaze. Each is equipped with a rope (to let himself out of a tree in which he lands), a two-way radio set, two days' rations, shovel, axe, grub hoe, flashlight. Officials say such a team can "whip any fire up to an acre and a half."

Abroad

Crop Report: Bad.

Balkan farmers have known for months that their wheat crop would be way below normal this year. But this week, with the crop turned golden and ready for harvest, they could reckon more closely the extent of the failure.

Rumanians expect their crop to be only a third the normal harvest of 5,000,000 tons. Yugoslavs are now resigned to importing for their own needs. Hungarians fear that they too won't have enough to feed themselves.

All this means bad news to Germany which must import at least 2,000,000 tons. Ordinarily, Rumania would supply half this amount, other Balkan states the remainder.

Tourists Take Note.

AP Newsman Henry Cassidy, riding a troop train from Paris to Berlin, reported:

"Judging from scenes along our route there won't be many battlefield tours after this war — so swiftly did the blitzkrieg pass. Whole fields and forests were left intact. Most towns were standing. Everywhere there were signs of quick reconstruction, and compared to the devastation of the World war trench fighting this war generally left only traces. Not until we reached Flanders was there any real evidence of war."

Quotes

J. Edgar Hoover: "Our domestic tranquillity is being attacked on every hand by forces that would revile and destroy the liberty, freedom and happiness guaranteed us as a free people."

Ordway Tead, New York City board of education chairman: "I cannot state too emphatically that higher education is fundamentally bankrupt today, multifarious courses in the college catalogues being designed solely for the purpose of providing intellectual excitement to a few teachers."

New Records

Prolific Cow.

In her lifetime of 18 years during which she gave unstintingly of her milk, a University of Nebraska cow, a few years back, set a world record by producing 228,880 pounds (114 tons) of milk. This week the Holstein Friesian Association of America was hailing a new champ, Ionia Aaggie Sadie Vale, a wholly unpampered Holstein of the Ionia, Mich., state hospital herd. She passed recently the old record while only 13½ years old and while still producing 73 pounds of milk daily.

Spinning Wheels.

Ab Jenkins, mayor of Salt Lake City, is less famous for that than for his speed driving.

This week he drove his 700-horsepower orange and blue "Mormon Meteor" 'round and 'round Bonneville salt flats for 24 hours and broke 21 records, from 50 kilometers to 3,000 miles.

Average for the 24 hours: 161.18 miles per hour, nearly four miles faster than his own record. On one stretch he did 185.

In Short

Proposed: Universal compulsory military training for Mexico, by President Cardenas.

Rushed: Work on an international Montreal-to-New-York highway.

Replaced: Gen. Sir Edmund Ironside, as commander-in-chief of the British home forces, by Lieut. Gen. Sir Alan Brooke, of the Northern Ireland "Fighting Brookes."

Promoted: To the rank of field marshal, 12 Nazi generals, by Herr Hitler. Field Marshal Goering was named "Reich's Marshal of Greater Germany."

How to Relieve Prickly Heat

—By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

What is prickly heat and what is the treatment of it?

The medical name for prickly heat is miliaria. It is generally agreed that it is due to the stopping up of the sweat ducts. The mouths of the sweat ducts swell up because the cells are unprotected by sufficient oil. There is a congestion of the capillaries and the formation of blisters or swellings in the upper layers of the skin.

Excessive sweating tends to remove the oil on the skin, and all cases of prickly heat are associated with excessive sweating.

Diagnosis is not always simple. Many eruptions are called prickly heat that are really insect bites, especially flea bites. A good point to notice in whether the rash affects the covered or exposed parts of the body. If the latter, insect bites or plant dermatitis may be suspected rather than prickly heat. Ringworm is another confusing possibility.

Soothing Treatment.

Treatment should consist of soothing preparations — lotions and powders. Starch, almond meal or bran water may be applied and the area then dried and dusted with 10 per cent boric acid powder with zinc oxide and starch. Calomine lotion with or without phenol is used in severe cases. Sponging with alcohol may be all that is needed. "Mexican heat powder" contains camphor, zinc oxide, boric acid and starch.

Is there any scientific evidence that middle-aged people with a history of heart attacks should remain at sea level?

* * *

The question concerns a man of 50 who had a moderate attack of angina 18 months ago and wants to take his vacation in the mountains. I quote the Journal of the American Medical Association that altitudes up to 5000 to 7500 feet are safe for those who have had coronary disease, provided there are no symptoms at the time and even if there are symptoms on condition that these persons avoid climbing steep grades, such as are common at high altitudes. Many feel better in the clear air of the hills at 1000 to 2000 feet than they do in the moist air at sea level. In fact the general experience is that heart symptoms are often benefited by such a change.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

J. A. Humberside—"Is honey at meals once a day injurious to the kidneys because of excess sugar?"

Aanswer—Sugar does not harm the kidneys. Honey is bad for diabetics, but diabetes is not a disease of the kidneys.

J. J., Howe, Ind.—"Is a pulse of 120 an indication of an over-active thyroid? Would this have anything to do with being underweight?"

Answer—Yes, to both questions.

HAVE ALL-DAY PICNIC.

Twenty-eight members and friends of the Sarah E. Lewis Junior club, No. 20, met for an all day picnic yesterday at Maple-Dell, the country home of one of their assistant advisers, Mrs. Clyde Neff. ## Garden Club Has Picnic; Launches Two New Projects

Members of the Mansfield Garden club enjoyed a picnic luncheon yesterday at the Hartman farm. Hostesses were Mrs. Wallace Campbell, Mrs. Alan Tappan, Mrs. Burton Preston and Mrs. Ernest Hartman. During the business meeting the group decided upon two new projects for the year.

They made plans for establishing a bird sanctuary in South park, and also decided to put identification markers on rare trees to be found in the Mansfield parks. The pink dogwood tree in the yard of the Women's club which was planted by the club in memory of Mrs. David Brucker will be among the first to be marked.

Another meeting will be held Aug. 9 with Mrs. Alfred Reynolds and Mrs. Fred Chamberlain as hostesses. Mrs. Leo Perl will have the paper on "Tuberous Rooted Begonias.

Heat Affects Men More Than Women

Mortality due directly or indirectly to the effects of heat is higher among men than women, evidentely because of the greater exposure to heat in men's occupations, according to the experience of a large life insurance company.

Highest death rate from heat or its effects is among old people or infants under one year.

For protection from heat, a number of common sense rules have been developed for young and old, men and women alike. Temperate living and increased attention to the amount of liquid consumed help ward off ill effects in hot weather.

Cooling, refreshing liquids such as beverages help offset the increased loss by perspiration, which is important to the body's natural cooling processes. These sparkling soft drinks quench thirst quicker, aid digestion and stimulate appetite.

Other precautions include avoidance of prolonged exposure to sun or excessive heat, keeping the head covered from direct sunlight, light porous clothing, frequent baths, and a moderate diet with more fruits and vegetables.

HOROSCOPE

For Sunday, July 28.

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds auguries of several very unusual and dramatic events, in which those who are able to withstand the tests and perhaps tribulations of experience and human adventure may be selected for tokens of esteem, preferment and promotion.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for the thrilling adventure of having high honors, dignity, promotion or expression of favoritism from those in high places.

A child born on this day, while being impulsive, aggressive and possibly quarrelsome, should be remarkably endowed with creative talents of unusual scope.

For Monday, July 29

MONDAY'S ASTROLOGICAL forecast is for a very lively and eventful day in which there may be some sudden and devastating event, probably upsetting many orthodox plans or normal ways of living. With discretion this may not prove destructive.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year of sudden and unusual happenings, which may prove disrupting unless handled with much poise, wisdom and discretion.

A child born on this day may be extremely versatile and talented, with many abilities of an unusual or subtle nature, springing perhaps from keen intuitions or other extra sensory preceptions.

Mother Objects To Letters

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a boy of 19 years. My father died four years ago and I support my mother and younger brother.

I have been coresponding for three years with a girl who lives in another city. I see her once in a while. We love each other and hope to marry some day. But my mother doesn't like her, although she has seen her only twice. She says we don't see each other enough to know whether we really love. We write only twice a week, and my mother says we can't afford that six cents a week.

I've gone out with other girls but they don't appeal to me. I've tried to persuade my mother that this girl is all right, but she is so set in her ways. I don't know what to do. I want to see the girl and also remain loyal to my mother. Please help me in my problem, Miss Fairfax.

PUZZLED.

You must be a very capable boy to be able to earn the family living at 19, and creditable as well. I should be more inclined to accept your judgment in picking out the right girl than I would that of the average boy of your age.

Still, as you have two years to wait before you can vote, why rush to the altar? If you make haste slowly in the meantime, your younger brother may be able to help support the family. I certainly think you're entitled to spend six cents a week on postage.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

When I was too young to know what real love was I married a man 11 years older than I am, very high tempered and set in his ways. A year later I met a boy, with whom I've fallen deeply in love. He is my sister's boy friend, but he says he loves me and if I weren't married he could love me more.

That was about five years ago, and I've loved him ever since, and have been out with him. My husband doesn't believe in dancing or having good times, and if he knew I did these things he would "raise the roof."

Do you think I ought to get a divorce, so I could marry this younger man who is more my ideal? Or do you think he's just kidding me along because he knows I'm married? He has never suggested marriage.

UNHAPPY A.

Hundreds of married women have found themselves out on the limb toward which you seem to be climbing. They're married and not in love with ther husbands, and hanging around is some young man who pays them compliments and makes love. This young man feels no sense of responsibility because the woman to whom he makes love is married. He's free as air.

The woman has an idea if she were to get a divorce the Lothario would suggest marriage, but he doesn't. And there she is, out on the limb, which her divorce has sawed through. The young man suggested marriage and would probably take to the tall timber, once she were free to marry him. I've had scores of letters such as yours, all cases which ended in disaster.

Honor Bride at Pantry Shower

Mrs. Hubert Hammon, the former Miss Jenna Dee Davis, was feted Thursday night at a party given by Miss Jeannette Kuhn, near Shelby, and Miss Margaret Mowrey, Bellville, at the former's home. The 14 guests hemmed towels and played cards.

Prizes were won by Miss Lucille Durbin and Miss Dorothy White, who presented their awards to the honoree. Mrs. Hammon was given a shower of pantry gifts, and a breakfast set by the hostesses.

A dessert course was served by the hostesses who seated the guests at one long table which was decorated with yellow and white candles and flowers. Each guest was given a corsage as a favor.

Honor Two Birthdays At Bridge Club Party

A dessert course was served at a long tables yesterday afternoon by Mrs. Maurice Brown, West Fourth street, when she entertained members of the Friday Bridge club. The birthdays of Mrs. Frank Campbell and Mrs. Nettie Hoyer, both of which were yesterday, were honored with a cake which decorated the table in addition to garden flowers and candles.

Winners were Mrs. Lewis Campbell and Mrs. Minnie Anderson, a guest. The next meeting will be held Aug. 9 with Mrs. Mary Johnson, Ohio street.

Schedule of Events

SUNDAY

Old Pal club—Chippewa Lake park, picnic supper and dancing.

Schnitzelbank club — Stewart cabin, Mifflin lake, picnic.

Friendly Eight club—Mohican State park, family outing.

Special Hazards At Farm

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph.D.

In case you go with your tot or runabout to visit on the farm, he may face some special hazards. Within a short while he will begin exploring. If there is an open spring, cistern or well, he will soon find it, probably fall into it. Even the brook may be perilous to him, especially after a shower.

The city tot or runabout is inclined to run behind the farm horses which, when frightened by him, may kick him. In the barn are other special dangers such as the hayfork in operation, fanning (screening) machine, fodder chopper and the like; and the mow-hole down which hay is dropped. The barn, very familiar to the farm boy as a place to romp, is dangerous to the city child ignorant of its perils.

Common Perils

The new city child on the farm may observe no caution about such farm machinery as the mower, reaper, or hay rake. While the farmer mows with the scythe about the buildings, the young child may toddle after him where he easily can be seriously injured. It is well to keep the tot and runabout under strict supervision when there is cutting of grass or hay near by. Hay riggings may be hazardous, especially if the upright posts are not held fast. Especially to a city child sitting on a load of hay while the wagon moves is very dangerous.

In the average farm home is a gun. Know where it is and see that your child has no access to it. Whereas the farm child of 'teen age may have learned to handle a gun with care, this gun will doubtless be perilous to the city child of any age. Country children visiting in the city will be less trained than their city cousins against the hazards of the street.

Long-Suffering Farmer

I wish that city parents visiting with their children in the homes of their country relatives would be more considerate of their hosts and hostesses. Many country folk are shamefully imposed upon by their city friends, especially by ill-trained visiting children.

What can be a worse pest on the farm than a badly disciplined brat visiting there with his parents? I have fellow feeling for grandparents who have to tolerate such little treasures.

Water Hazards

It is fine for children to learn early to swim, but the learning should go on with safety. Visiting children will take risks to show off and will often pretend to have swimming skill they do not possess. There is often more danger from disease from polluted ponds, lakes and streams than from drowning. Boys from eight to 14 are disposed to venture out in deep water on unsafe rafts and scows. They need to be checked.

In all these problems, safety presupposes adequate control and habits of obedience. Some children will lose their lives this summer simply because they had never learned the alphabet of obedience. And a few children will have to die because their parents have been led astray by the false prophets of no restraint.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

As we listened to Lillian's plea to be permitted to keep Olina from leaving her room while her mother was inspecting her restored emerald necklace we realized that she was telling "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth" when she chose the task of watching Olina instead of witnessing the restoration scene.

There is a strong sentimental streak in Lillian, and I knew that she would have enjoyed watching the surprise and joy of our royal guest when she saw her fabulously valuable jewels. But stronger than almost anything else in her makeup is her joy in the doing of a difficult task. We saw that she was positively reveling in the task my father had outlined.

"Have it your own way," my father said at last. "And I leave all the details to you. But we must get this phase of the affair over, for we have more important things to face."

We all knew what he meant. Jack Leslie must even now be plotting the terrible revenge he meant to take for the complete defeat he had suffered less than an hour before. Ultimate victory would be my father's. I was sure, for he held all the cards in his hands now, but I knew that Leslie's desperation and his partial insanity would lead him to actions which no man might predict.

"Margaret!" My father turned to me: "Will you and Lillian go to Queen Olga's suite now, please. Tell her, Margaret, that I wish to see her for a few minutes, if she will be so kind, and bring her back with you. Her daughter, Lillian, I will leave to your ingenuity."

Lillian sprang from her seat, snapped her hand smartly to an imaginary cap brim, and took me by the arm when I also had risen.

"Dead or alive," she tossed back with a grin, and marched me out of the room upon the word.

Once outside she dropped all frivolity.

"You yank Olga out as soon as she'll go," she said. "I'll conjure up something to detain Olina."

There was that in her voice which told me how strong was her dislike of Olina. Lillian is nothing if not fanatically loyal, and Mary, stanch loyal comrade of her own young daughter, Marion, is very dear to her. Olina's machinations against my niece had put her in Lillian's bad books forever, I feared, for Lillian has not my facility for forgetting unpleasant happenings.

"I don't possess your divine—and asinine — forgiveness," she told me once, and I knew that the barb at the end was deserved, for I often temper mercy with sentimentality instead of following the traditional pattern.

But my own heart was too hot with resentment against Olina for any objection to Lillian's strictures. I contented myself with a brief promise.

"I'll take Olga away at once," I said.

Neither of us spoke again until we reached the door of "the royal suite," as Mary dubs it. Lillian knocked, and Olina opened the door.

"Good afternoon," she said prettily. "Mama is in my room."

"She is here," Olga said as she came through the door from the farther room, "and exceedingly glad to see both of you. Please sit down!"

Lillian promptly took the chair which Olina drew forward for her, but I shook my head in declination of mine.

"I'm sorry, but I can't stop," I said. "I am simply a messenger. My father wishes you to come back with me to his room, immediately, if you can manage it."

LUCKY FOR LOVE + + + + + +

By JANE DIXON

(Copyright 1940)

CHAPTER II

"You'd think a boy of his age would have some manners," Clara gave a theatric shudder. "My nerves are a wreck, all those lights in the theater, the strain, the applause—and now that boy—"

The senior Marsh interrupted with a chuckle. "Bill's all right, Clara girl," he said in his ghost of a voice. "Just a healthy colt."

"That's what you think." Disdain, Clara judged, should go with this line. "If you'd take the trouble to correct him once in a while, to give him a good healthy tanning he might not turn out to be a—a—pest!"

"Who's a pest?" Bill demanded, bursting from the house in a whirl of flying arms and legs. "Ya, pest yourself. If I was givin' prizes I'd give you the Nitwit Prize. Nitwit! Hey, Sis," to Marilyn, who was trying to close her ears against the familiar family jangle, "I forgot to give you this. A boy brought it after you left for the store this noon. Bill dug into the pocket of his blouse and brought forth a crumpled yellow envelope. "I hadda sign your name so's he'd leave it with me."

"It's a—why it's a telegram." Marilyn stared with unbelieving eyes.

"A mistake, of course." Clara stretched forth her hand for the message. "Some one got our names mixed. I've had oodles of messages from admirers, wishing me luck in the contest."

"It's addressed to me." Marilyn tore open the envelope, glanced hurriedly at the words typed on the yellow paper. Glanced reread slowly, then tossed sheet and envelope above her head in an abandon of joy.

"Mums, Dad!" she sang. "I won, I won. I won!"

Mrs. Marsh was frightened by the intensity of that cry. "Now Baby," she soothed. "Don't act so. "Don't act so. I'll get you a nice glass of lemonade. All this excitement about Clara has been too much for us. It was Clara who won the beauty contest, Baby—"

"Sure, Mums, Clara won the beauty contest and I won the Jingle Jubilee—one thousand dollars for the best last line to a jingle about Clarco—America's super soap flakes."

Mrs. Marsh could do no more than whisper, "A thousand dollars. A thousand dollars! Baby, it can't be."

Mr. Marsh fumbled with a lapel of his wrinkled cotton coat. "Poetry," he murmured. "My little girl wins a poetry prize. She was always making up rhymes, even when she was a teeny tot. A poet!"

Young Bill Marsh went galloping around in circles, giving tongue to shrill noises. "Yi yippi yi." "Ride 'em cowboy." "Toot, toot yee-e-p!" Between circlings he stopped long enough to yell! "Hey, Sis, read it again. Maybe you made a mistake. Maybe it's a thousand pennies. Oh boy, have I got a smart sister! Oh boy, wait'll I tell Fats and Shrimpy. Mom, can I go tell Fats and Shrimpy? I gotta, Mom! You don't want me to burst, do you Mom? Hey Sis, how does it feel to be rich? Hey Sis—yi yippy ye-e-e!"

Clara Marsh stood silent, tense, an angry red rising from her throat to stain her cheeks.

"Oh' Clara can't take it!" Bill gibed, still on the gallop. "Lookit her. She's gonna' blow up!"

The taunt unleashed Clara's tongue, thick with malice. "You did this on purpose, Marilyn Marsh," she said wildly. "You fixed it so you'd get this telegram right after I'd won the contest. You couldn't stand to have me get ahead of you. You can't bear it because you're plain—because I got the good looks of the family. You think you can show people how much better it is to have brains than beauty. You schemed to cheat me out of the attention I'd get as a beauty contest winner. But you won't get away with it. I won't let you, I'll I'll—"

The last of her sister's malice stung Marilyn to speech.

"Clara," shock was leaving her a little weak, "have you gone out of your mind completely?"

Clara drew the bow of her lips to a hard straight line.

"I was never more sane," she said, "more clear-headed. Clear enough to see your cute game, my bright sister. You can wire back to those fools, whoever they are, and tell them you don't want their cheap money—you won't accept it. You wire 'em now, this very evening, before the newspapers get hold of it. Bill can take the wire down to the office—"

Bill yowled defiance. "Me send back a whole thousand dollars of sis's money? Like heck I will? She won it, didn't she, same as you, only Sis ain't a beauty nitwit. Dad, does Sis have to send back her own good money she earned just 'cause ol' Clara is such a doggone drip? Does she? Dad?"

Marilyn folded the yellow paper, returned it to its envelope, slipped them into a patch pocket of her cotton dress. "Take it easy, Bill," she said evenly. "There will be no need for you to go to the telegraph office. I haven't the slightest notion of refusing the Clarco award."

"Ma, Pa," Clara was in a frenzy of hate, of resentment. 'Are you going to stand there like a couple of numbskulls and let her cheat me—are you going to stand by and —and—"

Marilyn turned to go into the house. At the top of the steps she paused and said. "You shouldn't do it, Clara, whip yourself into a foam. When you do, you're really quite ugly."

Clara's strangled scream followed her into the dim hall.

Marilyn did not come down for supper.

* * *

"I'm fagged out," she said when her mother tapped on her door, urged her to take "just a bite so's you won't get headachy."

"Put a sandwich on a plate, there's a lamb," she begged. "Bill will bring it to me. And a glass of milk. I'll nibble and sip while I rest."

Mrs. Marsh did not insist. Such a day! No wonder her girls were upset. It might be better to keep them apart while they were so high-strung like this. Dear Clara was just a bundle of nerves. A bundle. Whatever made her say such crazy things? Of course she didn't mean a word she said. Just dear Clara's temper.

Marilyn slipped into her blue kimona (most of the pink flowers had been washed out of it). "The luxury of communion with an old friend," she mused, and pulled the paced the room, flung herself on soft blue folds close to her. She her bed, rose hastily and stood gazing out of the window, seeing nothing. She was hugging her good fortune. Dreaming dreams. Building fantastic castles, only to topple them over and start building new and more dazzling ones. Dreams. Castles. None of them would come true, none of them real, but it was fun to pretend.

In the morning Marilyn snatched a cup of coffee, made gestures with a piece of toast, and hummed her way out of the house in a great hurry. Clara always slept late, and breakfasted in bed. Marilyn's humming and toast were for benefit of her mother, who was still in a flutter.

In the Bon Ton General store, over a box of books they were unpacking, Marilyn told Sally Meacham, her friend and co-worker, she had won the Clarco prize arward. Sally collapsed into the book box. When thumping on the back had been administered, she revived into a spluttering tangle of words, exclamation points, question marks and squeaks of delight peppered between "oh-dearmes!" and 'hot cricketies!"

"Lynn Marsh," she gasped, "what in the name of Christmas are you doing in this dump, with a fortune like that on your hands?"

"I'm unpacking books, pal, or I was, until you went limp on me." Marilyn placed two volumes on the shelf, stood back to admire the effect. "You remember me. I'm the other girl who works in this department."

Sally folded her arms, fixed an accusing eye on her friend. "Do you mean you're going on slaving for Bon Ton with all that gold in the vault?"

"Stop clowning, Sally." Marilyn continued placing books. "That pot of gold is not going to keep the Marshes in cake and caviar. Every dollar of the thousand has its job cut out for it. Meantime, yours devotedly will be right here in the emporium collecting the weekly stipend."

"S'pose you sneak a dollar or so away from the pile before the creditors get wise to it, and let's go to the Silver Grill for luncheon. Get it? Luncheon, not lunch. Something in cream sauce and a salad that crunches. What say, Lucky Break?"

"I say, 'Yes ma'am, and a plate of peach ice cream with angel food trimmings'."

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

NO ARGUMENT AT ALL

EVERY PLAYER has been in spots which puzzle him, especially after his partner has made a business double of the opponents which looks to him like a precarious venture. He hates to incur the wrath of his partner for taking out the double, if it should develop that a lot of points could be scored by leaving it in. At the same time, he may be afraid the opponents will make their doubled contract, because his own hand is not particularly strong in defensive values. But if he has previously misled his partner about his defensive strength, the question isn't even close. He must take it out.

South must be familiar with the cartoons which show the anger of a player at his partner for taking out a business double. He was furious at North for doing what had been done, as he expected a juicy set since he had both of the opponents' side suits pretty well plugged up.

When the hand was over, however, he sang a different tune. An extended post-mortem disclosed the fact that East and West could make 5-Clubs like rolling off a log, and could get an extra trick against any opening lead but a heart, by leading toward the spade K and then using it for the discard of a heart from West's hand.

North was exactly right for doing as he did. His hand was powerful at spades, but virtually worthless otherwise, nowhere near as valuable on the defense as his opening bid had indicated. The 5-Spade contract was down only two, with the loss of one trick in each suit for a very profitable save.

HUNDREDS PLAN TO PARADE IN ASHLAND FEST

Event Wednesday Night High Point In Celebration of 125th Year.

ASHLAND—Hundreds are expected to participate in the parade to be held here next Wednesday, as a part of the celebration of the 125th year since the founding of the city of Ashland.

The parade itself will be one of the largest ever staged in this city, as local citizens and former Ashlanders gather to observe 125 years of history here, since the village was laid out as two houses back in 1815.

To participate in the parade will be several patriotic and civic organizations, as well as representatives of the city's industries. Floats are to be entered to show the products manufactured here, and of how their evolution has affected the course of the city's growth.

Expected to participate are the Drum and Bugle Corps of Elyria Post No. 12, American Legion Drum and Bugle corps, the local national guard companies, patriotic organizations, lodges, community clubs, city merchants, etc.

All this week, the city has been bustling with activity, with flags and bunting everywhere, the windows have been decorated with historical displays, and already the place resembles "Old Home week," with persons going about from store to store, asking, "Does so-and-so still own this store?"

The program will officially get under way at the Ashland college stadium next Monday, with the presentation of a historical pageant with 600 in the cast.

That night, Governor John W. Bricker is expected to be here to crown Miss Margaret Thornburg, descendant from the county pioneers, as queen of the Cen-Quar.

mercury below the 70 mark, with 67 as the low point.

The storm was accompanied by a strong wind which blew trees over and broke off large branches from trees.

Weather observers explained today that the mass of cool air moving eastward had been caught in an "atmospheric jam" somewhere in Indiana, delaying its expected early arrival.

It was still much too hot for comfort today and the state's death toll from drownings and heat prostrations mounted to 53. Latest victims were Mary Lanich, 15, drowned in the Olentangy river in Columbus; Donald Wilson, 9, drowned in the Ohio river at Ironton; Frank B. Cherrington, who died of a heart attack caused by the heat at Delaware, and George Genau, 50, who died of heat prostration at his Cincinnati home.

The death toll over the nation attributable to the heat was more than 500 today.

The hottest state in the union yesterday was Kansas. The mercury hit 107 at Dodge City, 104 at Wichita and Concordia, and 100 at Lebo. Cincinnati suffered under a 96-degree temperature and Columbus thermometers stood at 97.

In Youngstown, citizens experienced a 15-degree drop in 15 minutes, thermometers sliding from 100 to 85 during a storm, and down to 76 degrees during the storm hour.

This morning however, cities in northern Ohio were enjoying temperatures in the lower 80's. Akron had 82 and Cleveland 81, while Toledo was practically shivering with a 79 high.

THEATERS

Bob Hope and the Ghosts.

The production of "The Ghost Breakers" the mystery comedy which opens at the Ohio theater today was made in an atmosphere as bizarre as any picture produced since "The Cat and the Canary." Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard are the co-stars of the picture. The principal action of the picture occurs in the eerie atmosphere of a supposedly haunted castle on an island off Cuba. There are spooks to the right and left of them but they go after them with gags in one of the merriest mystery stories of the season.

Gay Comedy Romance.

Recommended as one of the gayest comedies and interesting stories of the film year is "My Love Came Back" which is showing beginning today at the Madison. Olivia de Havilland and Jeffery Lynn portray young people on their way up in the world. Eddie Albert and Jane Wyman head the fine supporting cast. The co-feature is "Phantom Raiders" which is a new Nick Carter adventure with Walter Pidgeon, Joseph Schildkraut, Florence Rice, John Carroll and many others.

Boyhood of Edison.

That Thomas Alva Edison, America's greatest inventor, was certainly no lump of sugar in his youth will be revealed to the public not familiar with his boyhood in "Young Tom Edison" which comes Sunday for a three-day show at the Ritz. Mickey Rooney plays tahe roll of Tom, who was just like any other normal mischieveous boy. Fay Bainter, George Bancroft, Virginia Weidler and many other stars are in the supporting cast. The second feature is "My Little Chickadee" with Mae West and W. C. Fields furnishing the laughs.

Career of Nursing.

"Vigil in the Night," A. J. Cronin's human story of courage and devotion demanded of girls who choose nursing for a career, has been brought to the screen with Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne and Anne Shirley in the stellar roles. Carole and Anne plays sisters and contrasting personalities but who are interested in the same problems. The second attraction is "Millionaire Playboy" with Joe Penner and Linda Hayes in the leads. In this latest of Joe's comics he is cast as a girl-shy rich fellow who hiccups when kissed.

Rain Halts Tilt; Braves Invade Tiffin Today

Fremont Tilt Postponed; Ankenbrandt Released; Radoumis Returned to Fargo-Moorhead.

AIDED by a day's rest the Mansfield Braves invade Tiffin to meet the Mudhens under the lights tonight and will engage the Pandas in a doubleheader at Lima Sunday.

The Braves were to tangle with Fremont under the floodlights at the Fairground last night, but rain forced postponement of the contest.

After the Mansfield club clashes with Lima it returns to the Fair park to meet Tiffin in a twin bill Monday night. Brave officials today stated that it will be "Boy Scout" night and all scouts will be admitted free.

Mansfield takes to the road Tuesday and makes one home appearance before Aug. 6. Lima will be entertained in a doubleheader Sunday, Aug. 4. The Richland county fair, which opens Wednesday, July 31, is the reason for the long road engagement.

Joe C. Hartline, president of the Braves, announced today that Frankie Ankenbrandt, a member of the 1939 team, who has been on the suspended list most of the season with a nose injury, has been released. Hartline also stated that Alex Radoumis, tall righthander, has been returned to Fargo-Moorhead of the Northern league.

* * *

Everett Stenman will start against Tiffin tonight and Manager Dewey Stover is expected to call on George Laurila and Bob Arnold to face the Pandas Sunday.

The Braves are only two-and-a-half games ahead of the fast-stepping Fremont Green Sox and will "shoot the works" over the week-end in an effort to retain their advantage.

With the recent leasing of 11 new lakes, 366 miles of publicly owned shoreline, and 16,000 acres of water from the Muskingum Watershed Conservancy District, Ohio sportsmen get the biggest break in many years. Of particular interest is the fact that all shorelines will be protected 100 feet back from the waterline for public use exclusively.

If you hook a fish deep and wish to put it back . . . don't yank. If a fly, cut off at the eye; the fish will get rid of it after a time. If a bait hook, push it on through, cutting the gut off if it is of the snelled variety. Care must be taken in unhooking small fish, for they can't take much punishment and survive.

The importance of a good reel is appreciated by every bait caster. Tuncker's carry an unusually complete selection of all the leading makes, from a good level winding reel at 95c, to the deluxe types that sell up to $25.00.

SEMI-PROS ENTER FINAL ROUNDS OF TOURNAMENT

SPRINGFIELD — (AP) — Four more teams were slated to fall by the wayside in Ohio's semi-pro baseball tournament today, leaving six clubs to battle it out for the right to represent the state in the national competition at Wichita, Kan., next month.

Protests over an umpire's decisions resulted in an order for a return match between the Alcony All-Stars and the Troy McKaig Gardeners. The Gardeners took a 6 to 1 victory last night, but the win was wiped off the books. In the night's other tilt the Springfield Crowell Colliers took their third straight, downing the Springfield National Supply 12 to 2.

FEARLESS PETER COPS EIGHTH STRAIGHT RACE

Turner Will Tackle Phils For Redlegs

Cincy Increases Lead to Eight and a Half Games.

PHILADELPHIA—(AP)—Rolling up their National league lead to eight and one-half games, the first-place Reds met Philadelphia again today without the sign of a letup in their devastating drive to lengthen the distance ahead of battling Brooklyn, in second place.

Milkman Jim Turner, with a record of seven victories and three defeats, or Lloyd (Whitey) Moore, seeking his fifth triumph of the season and his third in a row, were scheduled to take the mound against Hugh Mulcahy for the Phils.

Instead of letting up, with a safe margin tucked away, the Reds increased their batting tempo last night to grab a 9-5 triumph from the cellar-dwelling Phils.

Not that eight hits are the greatest assurance of victory, but the Reds did it the easy way, took them when they were needed from Kirby Higbe and Sylvester Johnson and counted nine runs as Paul Derringer chalked up his 14th victory of the season.

Higbe allowed only two hits in six innings but in the seventh the Reds bunched four hits for four runs and scored seven times in the last three rounds.

Cincinnati counted two runs in the first inning. Homers by Bob Bragan and Joe Marty put the Phils ahead 3-2 before the seventh stanza strike.

With the bases loaded Bragan fumbled Ernie Lombardie's roller, which let in a run to tie the score. Bill Werber and Ival Goodman followed with a single and a double to bring in three more runs.

Frank McCormick "iced" the triumph with his 11th home run of the season, with a pair of mates aboard, in the ninth inning.

It was Cincinnati's seventh straight victory and the 17th in 19 starts.

Cracked Tooth And Humidity Leave Bob Cool

Mound Ace Has Perfect Control As He Stops Washington, 13 to 2.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—It takes more than an appointment with the dentist and wilting humidity to shake the composure of Bob Feller.

The fans in the stands were listless from the heat, but Feller corralled a good share of it in his right arm and—with the help of some heavy hitting from Indian teammates—set the Washington Senators down 13 to 2 yesterday for his 16th victory.

As he kept a date with the dentist today for extraction of a tooth cracked by a thrown ball, the young speedballer could reflect on a new achievement—the first game of his four-year career in which he walked not a single man.

Moreover, Feller collected two doubles among the Tribe's 20 hits off Rene Monteagudo and Joe Krakauskas, and he's almost as eager for hits as for victories. He struck out only four batters, however, a new low for him this season, and yielded eight safe blows.

* * *

Lou Boudreau led the Indians' offensive that moved them within a half game of the first place Detroit Tigers and avenged the Nats' sweep of a three-game series during Cleveland's last eastern tour.

* * *

Boudreau had a perfect day at bat, getting four hits including a triple and a double in as many trips to the plate. Third Baseman Ken Keltner drove in five runs with two triples—the first producing three tallies in the first inning and putting the Indians safely in front. Hal Trosky collected a double and two singles and Ben Chapman three singles. The Indians' best previous batting performance this season was 17 hits.

The victory was the 24th for the Tribe off a southpaw, against seven defeats.

Joe Dobson, assigned to start today as the Tribe continued its drive for revenge, drew another left-handed opponent—Ken Chase. Dobson pitched a shutout victory over Boston last Sunday.

The series with the Nats concludes tomorrow with a doubleheader in which Al Milnar and Al Smith will pitch for the Tribe.

SPORTS PARADE

By HENRY McLEMORE

MONTAUK, N. Y. — (U.P.) — A golf tournament that will produce more records than any national open in history began here today when the first foursome in the summer get-together of the artists and writers drank a toast with eye-openers and plunged into the dunes in search of tee shots.

* * *

Before the sun (and the management of the Montauk Manor) set on the 36-hole tournament tomorrow new and enduring marks are certain to be established in the following divisions:

1. Number of divots dug up.
2. Size of divots wrested from the soil.
3. Lost balls.
4. Whiffs.
5. Clubs broken.
6. Number of caddies exhausted from laughing.
7. Pick-ups.
8. Five, six, seven and eight putt greens.
9. Squawks over handicaps.
10. Bizarre golfing costumes.
11. Players lost in rough and in dunes.

* * *

12. Number of players finished after dark. Favored in the pre-tournament betting is Cartoonist Rube Goldberg, one of the few ambidextrous golfers in the country. That is, he plays just as miserably left-handed as he does right-handed, and requires his caddy to carry two sets of clubs.

* * *

Goldberg is expected to get stiff competition from Billy (Barney Google) DeBeck, the only man whose backswing is so slow that fellow artists often use him as a still life subject while he is swinging.

Gabby Hartnett's Laughing Boys Start Stretch Drive

By SID FEDER.
(AP Sports Writer)

IF THE class in baseball history will please come to order, the professor's lecture today will have to do with those laughing boys from Wrigley Field.

* * *

It takes only a very small dip into recent records to show that in the last five years or so, just about the time a club figured it had the National League flag all polished up and nailed to its mast, those Chicago laughing boys got hot in the stretch to make trouble.

There was that time in '38, for instance, when the Pittsburgh Pirates had all arrangements made for the world series at Forbes Field, even to the extra hot-dog stands. Along came the laughing boys with 20 out of 25 in August, a dozen more in September—and the Buc balloon was busted.

Then, in '36, they sizzled in September to finish a fast-coming second to the Giants. And who in the class forgets '35, when the Cubs poured it on at the end with 21 straight to take the flag.

Now, this is hardly the spot to bring up that gag about history repeating, what with the Cincinnati Reds riding along there 8½ games in front of the pack, after yesterday's 9-5 decision over the Phillies. And it's still much too early for the Cubs to be beginning their regular stretch drive of it, if that's what they have in mind. However, since there doesn't seem to be any other club around ready to give the Rhinelanders a tussle for the title, you might read between the lines of the handwriting on the wall in the Cubs' doings of late.

They've just finished taking four out of their last five. They've scored 39 runs in that stretch, topping the whole thing off with a gaudy 14-1 decision over the New York Giants yesterday.

One of the most hilarious of the laughing boys, Lefty Larry French was the big noise. Lefty Larry tossed a neat seven-hitter at the terriers, and banged four runs home himself with three singles.

Terry Moore belted two homers as the highlight of the get-together between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Brooklyn Dodgers, but rain forced a halt in the 10th and they wound up in a three-all deadlock. Ken Heintzelman left-handed the Boston Bees silly and tossed the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 9-0 whitewash win with a five-hit pitching performance.

Detroit's American league lead was shaved to a half game, by the Philadelphia Athletics. George Caster was hot when he had to be and pitched an eight-hit 7-1 victory in that one. At the same time, second-place Cleveland walloped Washington 13-2. A 20-hit attack—the Indians' biggest of the season—and Bobby Feller's eight-hit tossing turned the trick.

The New York Yankees, invading Chicago for a night game before a roaring crowd of 48,104, looked like the real thing for a change as they whipped the White Sox, 10-2. Spud Chandler not only pitched five-hit ball in this one, but hit a pair of homers, himself—one with the bases loaded. The Boston Red Sox also broke out their hitting hats and climbed all over the St. Louis Browns, 14-7. Ted Williams hit two homers and Joe Cronin and Jim Tabor one apiece.

TENNIS FANS NOTE:

Details of the 1940 City Tennis tournament will be found in Sunday's edition of The Mansfield News-Journal, officials of the tournament announced today. The tournament will be sponsored this year by Tuncker Brothers.

HUNDREDS PLAN TO PARADE IN ASHLAND FEST

Event Wednesday Night High Point In Celebration of 125th Year.

ASHLAND—Hundreds are expected to participate in the parade to be held here next Wednesday, as a part of the celebration of the 125th year since the founding of the city of Ashland.

The parade itself will be one of the largest ever staged in this city, as local citizens and former Ashlanders gather to observe 125 years of history here, since the village was laid out as two houses back in 1815.

To participate in the parade will be several patriotic and civic organizations, as well as representatives of the city's industries. Floats are to be entered to show the products manufactured here, and of how their evolution has affected the course of the city's growth.

Expected to participate are the Drum and Bugle Corps of Elyria Post No. 12, American Legion Drum and Bugle corps, the local national guard companies, patriotic organizations, lodges, community clubs, city merchants, etc.

All this week, the city has been bustling with activity, with flags and bunting everywhere, the windows have been decorated with historical displays, and already the place resembles "Old Home week," with persons going about from store to store, asking, "Does so-and-so still own this store?"

The program will officially get under way at the Ashland college stadium next Monday, with the presentation of a historical pageant with 600 in the cast.

That night, Governor John W. Bricker is expected to be here to crown Miss Margaret Thornburg, descendant from the county pioneers, as queen of the Cen-Quar.

The Harrison boy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. R. K. Harrison, of 305 College avenue, and at the time of his departure, was believed headed for New London, where he has relatives.

mercury below the 70 mark, with 67 as the low point.

The storm was accompanied by a strong wind which blew trees over and broke off large branches from trees.

Weather observers explained today that the mass of cool air moving eastward had been caught in an "atmospheric jam" somewhere in Indiana, delaying its expected early arrival.

It was still much too hot for comfort today and the state's death toll from drownings and heat prostrations mounted to 53. Latest victims were Mary Lanich, 15, drowned in the Olentangy river in Columbus; Donald Wilson, 9, drowned in the Ohio river at Ironton; Frank B. Cherrington, who died of a heart attack caused by the heat at Delaware, and George Genau, 50, who died of heat prostration at his Cincinnati home.

The death toll over the nation attributable to the heat was more than 500 today.

The hottest state in the union yesterday was Kansas. The mercury hit 107 at Dodge City, 104 at Wichita and Concordia, and 100 at Lebo. Cincinnati suffered under a 96-degree temperature and Columbus thermometers stood at 97.

In Youngstown, citizens experienced a 15-degree drop in 15 minutes, thermometers sliding from 100 to 85 during a storm, and down to 76 degrees during the storm hour.

This morning however, cities in northern Ohio were enjoying temperatures in the lower 80's. Akron had 82 and Cleveland 81, while Toledo was practically shivering with a 79 high.

THEATERS

Bob Hope and the Ghosts.

The production of "The Ghost Breakers" the mystery comedy which opens at the Ohio theater today was made in an atmosphere as bizarre as any picture produced since "The Cat and the Canary." Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard are the co-stars of the picture. The principal action of the picture occurs in the eerie atmosphere of a supposedly haunted castle on an island off Cuba. There are spooks to the right and left of them but they go after them with gags in one of the merriest mystery stories of the season.

Gay Comedy Romance.

Recommended as one of the gayest comedies and interesting stories of the film year is "My Love Came Back" which is showing beginning today at the Madison. Olivia de Havilland and Jeffery Lynn portray young people on their way up in the world. Eddie Albert and Jane Wyman head the fine supporting cast. The co-feature is "Phantom Raiders" which is a new Nick Carter adventure with Walter Pidgeon, Joseph Schildkraut, Florence Rice, John Carroll and many others.

Boyhood of Edison.

That Thomas Alva Edison, America's greatest inventor, was certainly no lump of sugar in his youth will be revealed to the public not familiar with his boyhood in "Young Tom Edison" which comes Sunday for a three-day show at the Ritz. Mickey Rooney plays tahe roll of Tom, who was just like any other normal mischeveous boy. Fay Bainter, George Bancroft, Virginia Weidler and many other stars are in the supporting cast. The second feature is "My Little Chickadee" with Mae West and W. C. Fields furnishing the laughs.

Career of Nursing.

"Vigil in the Night," A. J. Cronin's human story of courage and devotion demanded of girls who choose nursing for a career, has been brought to the screen with Carole Lombard, Brian Aherne and Anne Shirley in the stellar roles. Carole and Anne plays sisters and contrasting personalities but who are interested in the same problems. The second attraction is "Millionaire Playboy" with Joe Penner and Linda Hayes in the leads. In this latest of Joe's comics he is cast as a girl-shy rich fellow who hiccups when kissed.

Rain Halts Tilt; Braves Invade Tiffin Today

Fremont Tilt Postponed; Ankenbrandt Released; Radoumis Returned to Fargo-Moorhead.

AIDED by a day's rest the Mansfield Braves invade Tiffin to meet the Mudhens under the lights tonight and will engage the Pandas in a doubleheader at Lima Sunday.

The Braves were to tangle with Fremont under the floodlights at the Fairground last night, but rain forced postponement of the contest.

After the Mansfield club clashes with Lima it returns to the Fair park to meet Tiffin in a twin bill Monday night. Brave officials today stated that it will be "Boy Scout" night and all scouts will be admitted free.

Mansfield takes to the road Tuesday and makes one home appearance before Aug 6. Lima will be entertained in a doubleheader Sunday, Aug. 4. The Richland county fair, which opens Wednesday, July 31, is the reason for the long road engagement.

Joe C. Hartline, president of the Braves, announced today that Frankie Ankenbrandt, a member of the 1939 team, who has been on the suspended list most of the season with a nose injury, has been released. Hartline also stated that Alex Radoumis, tall righthander, has been returned to Fargo-Moorhead of the Northern league.

* * *

Everett Stenman will start against Tiffin tonight and Manager Dewey Stover is expected to call on George Laurila and Bob Arnold to face the Pandas Sunday.

The Braves are only two-and-a-half games ahead of the fast-stepping Fremont Green Sox and will "shoot the works" over the week-end in an effort to retain their advantage.

"Woods and Waters"

By YUNCKER BROS.

With the recent leasing of 11 new lakes, 366 miles of publicly owned shoreline, and 16,000 acres of water from the Muskingum Watershed Conservancy District, Ohio sportsmen get the biggest break in many years. Of particular interest is the fact that all shorelines will be protected 100 feet back from the waterline for public use exclusively.

If you hook a fish deep and wish to put it back . . . don't yank. If a fly, cut off at the eye: the fish will get rid of it after a time. If a bait hook, push it on through, cutting the gut off if it is of the snelled variety. Care must be taken in unhooking small fish, for they can't take much punishment and survive.

The importance of a good reel is appreciated by every bait caster. Yuncker's carry an unusually complete selection of all the leading makes, from a good level winding reel at 95c, to the deluxe types that sell up to $25.00.

Don't stand up in a small boat. If you're fishing, remember you may join the fish in the water unless you are firmly seated with center of gravity low in the boat.

The Tintata lizard of New Zealand actually has three eyes. The extra one is on the top of the head. Sounds like a good idea for humans in these days of thick traffic and numerous traffic lights.

SEMI-PROS ENTER FINAL ROUNDS OF TOURNAMENT

SPRINGFIELD — (AP) — Four more teams were slated to fail by the wayside in Ohio's semi-pro baseball tournament today, leaving six clubs to battle it out for the right to represent the state in the national competition at Wichita, Kan., next month.

Protests over an umpire's decisions resulted in an order for a return match between the Alcony All-Stars and the Troy McKaig Gardeners. The Gardeners took a 6 to 1 victory last night, but the win was wiped off the books. In the night's other tilt the Springfield Crowell Colliers took their third straight, downing the Springfield National Supply 12 to 2.

FEARLESS PETER COPS EIGHTH STRAIGHT RACE

PAWTUCKET, R. I. — (AP) — Fearless Peter, Ohio colt, was undefeated today after eight harness races this season and his latest grand circuit victory was so easy he was barred from the betting after the first heat.

He won the $3,135 American stake here last night for his owner, Dr. L. M. Gulinger of Andover, O. H. M. (Doc) Parshall was on the sulky behind the son of Peter Volo.

Turner Will Tackle Phils For Redlegs

Cincy Increases Lead to Eight and a Half Games.

PHILADELPHIA—(AP)—Rolling up their National league lead to eight and one-half games, the first-place Reds met Philadelphia again today without the sign of a letup in their devastating drive to lengthen the distance ahead of batting Brooklyn, in second place.

Milkman Jim Turner, with a record of seven victories and three defeats, or Lloyd (Whitey) Moore, seeking his fifth triumph of the season and his third in a row, were scheduled to take the mound against Hugh Mulcahy for the Phils.

Instead of letting up, with a safe margin tucked away, the Reds increased their batting tempo last night to grab a 9-5 triumph from the cellar-dwelling Phils.

Not that eight hits are the greatest assurance of victory, but the Reds did it the easy way, took them when they were needed from Kirby Higbe and Sylvester Johnson and counted nine runs as Paul Derringer chalked up his 14th victory of the season.

Higbe allowed only two hits in six innings but in the seventh the Reds bunched four hits for four runs and scored seven times in the last three rounds.

Cincinnati counted two runs in the first inning. Homers by Bob Bragan and Joe Marty put the Phils ahead 3-2 before the seventh stanza strike.

With the bases loaded Bragan fumbled Ernie Lombardie's roller, which let in a run to tie the score. Bill Werber and Ival Goodman followed with a single and a double to bring in three more runs.

Frank McCormick "iced" the triumph with his 11th home run of the season, with a pair of mates aboard, in the ninth inning.

It was Cincinnati's seventh straight victory and the 17th in 19 starts.

Cracked Tooth And Humidity Leave Bob Cool

Mound Ace Has Perfect Control As He Stops Washington, 13 to 2.

CLEVELAND—(AP)—It takes more than an appointment with the dentist and wilting humidity to shake the composure of Bob Feller.

The fans in the stands were listless from the heat, but Feller corralled a good share of it in his right arm and—with the help of some heavy hitting from Indian teammates—set the Washington Senators down 13 to 2 yesterday for his 16th victory.

As he kept a date with the dentist today for extraction of a tooth cracked by a thrown ball, the young speedballer could reflect on a new achievement—the first game of his four-year career in which he walked not a single man.

Moreover, Feller collected two doubles among the Tribe's 20 hits off Rene Monteagudo and Joe Krakauskas, and he's almost as eager for hits as for victories. He struck out only four batters, however, a new low for him this season, and yielded eight safe blows.

* * *

Lou Boudreau led the Indians' offensive that moved them within a half game of the first place Detroit Tigers and avenged the Nats' sweep of a three-game series during Cleveland's last eastern tour.

* * *

Boudreau had a perfect day at bat, getting four hits including a triple and a double in as many trips to the plate. Third Baseman Ken Keltner drove in five runs with two triples—the first producing three tallies in the first inning and putting the Indians safely in front. Hal Trosky collected a double and two singles and Ben Chapman three singles. The Indians' best previous batting performance this season was 17 hits.

The victory was the 24th for the Tribe off a southpaw, against seven defeats.

Joe Dobson, assigned to start today as the Tribe continued its drive for revenge, drew another left-handed opponent—Ken Chase. Dobson pitched a shutout victory over Boston last Sunday.

The series with the Nats concludes tomorrow with a doubleheader in which Al Milnar and Al Smith will pitch for the Tribe.

SPORTS PARADE

By HENRY McLEMORE

MONTAUK, N. Y. — (U.P.) — A golf tournament that will produce more records than any national open in history began here today when the first foursome in the summer get-together of the artists and writers drank a toast with eye-openers and plunged into the dunes in search of tee shots.

* * *

Before the sun (and the management of the Montauk Manor) set on the 36-hole tournament tomorrow new and enduring marks are certain to be established in the following divisions:

1. Number of divots dug up.
2. Size of divots wrested from the soil.
3. Lost balls.
4. Whiffs.
5. Clubs broken.
6. Number of caddies exhausted from laughing.
7. Pick-ups.
8. Five, six, seven and eight putt greens.
9. Squawks over handicaps.
10. Bizarre golfing costumes.
11. Players lost in rough and in dunes.

* * *

12. Number of players finished after dark. Favored in the pre-tournament betting is Cartoonist Rube Goldberg, one of the few ambidextrous golfers in the country. That is, he plays just as miserably left-handed as he does right-handed, and requires his caddy to carry two sets of clubs.

* * *

Goldberg is expected to get stiff competition from Billy (Barney Google) DeBeck, the only man whose backswing is so slow that fellow artists often use him as a still life subject while he is swinging.

Gabby Hartnett's Laughing Boys Start Stretch Drive

By SID FEDER.
(AP Sports Writer)

IF THE class in baseball history will please come to order, the professor's lecture today will have to do with those laughing boys from Wrigley Field.

* * *

It takes only a very small dip into recent records to show that in the last five years or so, just about the time a club figured it had the National League flag all polished up and nailed to its mast, those Chicago laughing boys got hot in the stretch to make trouble.

There was that time in '38, for instance, when the Pittsburgh Pirates had all arrangements made for the world series at Forbes Field, even to the extra hot-dog stands. Along came the laughing boys with 20 out of 25 in August, a dozen more in September—and the Buc balloon was busted.

Then, in '36, they sizzled in September to finish a fast-coming second to the Giants. And who in the class forgets '35, when the Cubs poured it on at the end with 21 straight to take the flag.

Now, this is hardly the spot to bring up that gag about history repeating, what with the Cincinnati Reds riding along there 8½ games in front of the pack, after yesterday's 9-5 decision over the Phillies. And it's still much too early for the Cubs to be beginning their regular stretch drive of it, if that's what they have in mind. However, since there doesn't seem to be any other club around ready to give the Rhinelanders a tussle for the title, you might read between the lines of the handwriting on the wall in the Cubs' doings of late.

They've just finished taking four out of their last five. They've scored 39 runs in that stretch, topping the whole thing off with a gaudy 14-1 decision over the New York Giants yesterday.

One of the most hilarious of the laughing boys, Lefty Larry French was the big noise. Lefty Larry tossed a neat seven-hitter at the terriers, and banged four runs home himself with three singles.

Terry Moore belted two homers as the highlight of the get-together between the St. Louis Cardinals and the Brooklyn Dodgers, but rain forced a halt in the 10th and they wound up in a three-all deadlock. Ken Heintzelman left-handed the Boston Bees silly and tossed the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 9-0 whitewash win with a five-hit pitching performance.

Detroit's American league lead was shaved to a half game, by the Philadelphia Athletics. George Caster was hot when he had to be and pitched an eight-hit 7-1 victory in that one. At the same time, second-place Cleveland walloped Washington 13-2. A 20-hit attack—the Indians' biggest of the season—and Bobby Feller's eight-hit tossing turned the trick.

The New York Yankees, invading Chicago for a night game before a roaring crowd of 48,104, looked like the real thing for a change as they whipped the White Sox, 10-2. Spud Chandler not only pitched five-hit ball in this one, but hit a pair of homers, himself—one with the bases loaded. The Boston Red Sox also broke out their hitting hats and climbed all over the St. Louis Browns, 14-7. Ted Williams hit two homers and Joe Cronin and Jim Tabor one apiece.

TENNIS FANS NOTE!

Details of the 1940 City Tennis tournament will be found in Sunday's edition of The Mansfield News-Journal, officials of the tournament announced today. The tournament will be sponsored this year by Yuncker Brothers.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kans. —(AP) —The head of an Arkansas City household, a game cock fancier, had an old bird that wasn't much of a fighter any more. She accepted the challenge and was happy over the right good job of cooking she did until her husband discovered she had killed the wrong bird. She'd got a prize rooster for which he had just paid $25.

STOCK MARKET FAILS TO MOVE VERY FAR TODAY

Fractional Gains Are Fairly Distributed; European War Blamed.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—The stock market kept its feet on the ground today but generally failed to move very far in any direction.

While fractional gains were fairly well distributed at the start of the final hour, dealings were so slow price changes were meaningless.

The European war continued to take the greater part of the blame for the insipid market performance.

A shade higher were U. S. Steel, Youngstown Sheet, General Motors, Chrysler, Anaconda, Kennecott, Glenn Martin, American Telephone, Loft, American Telephone and Consolidated Edison.

Although market followers entertained high hopes for the steel industry, they did not overlook the summary of the American Iron & Steel Institute disclosing new orders for structural metal in June fell about 10 per cent below the like 1939 month. Backlogs of orders at the end of June were placed at 388,548 tons compared with 481,234 on hand at this time last year.

FEW OBJECTORS

LONDON—(U.P.)—Whether it is because as they grow older they become more conscious of their responsibility to their country than of their conscientious objections, the fact persists that with calling up of each age group the "conchies" are diminishing.

In the recent call of the 26 age group there were only 1.23 per cent of conscientious objectors. When the 25s registered in April there were 1.64. A month earlier there were 1.98 and in October and December last there wer 2.3 pr cent.

Volume Lists 32,000 Words of Chippewa Language.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. —(U.P.)— Earl F. Campbell, a Minneapolis sign painter, has completed a dictionary containing some 32,000 words of the Chippewa Indian language.

Campbell, who is only one-sixteenth Chippewa himself, began his laborious task four years ago when his father, George M. Campbell of White Earth, Minn., died, leaving a huge file of countless scraps of paper on which Chippewa words with their English equivalents were scribbled.

To his father's collection, Campbell added 8,000 more words which he picked up from Chippewa Indians in northern Minnesota reservations.

Here is an example of the Chippewa language:

"O-d o n n-ah-k e e-way o-d a h-schoon-egun-chee-ga-na-way - gee-gah dag gee, ah-bah-gee-too-wad-ode-nee, wayn-ingieu-gay tay an-ah-ha nob-haa."

Campbell says this means "The language of the ancient and honorable tribe of Chippewa. Minnesota's true natives, has been preserved for posterity."

Georgia Seeking Airport Erected Up Above Clouds

ATLANTA, Ga.—(U.P.)—Georgia's Gov. E. D. Rivers plans the construction of an airport "above the clouds."

The governor has instructed the state planning board to investigate the possibility of building an emergency landing field atop Bald Mountain, the highest peak in north Georgia.

He pointed out the advantage of this idea—that when planes encounter a low ceiling it would be possible for them to land on this emeregncy field, since it is 4,768 feet above sea leevl. If landing is impossible at Atlanta, planes could continue to Bald Mountain, only a short distance from the Georgia capital.

Gov. Rivers thought of the idea when the plane bearing Georgia's Attorney General Ellis Arnall ran into difficulties because of the low ceiling.

Georgia owns the top of the mountain, which is a state park, and the Federal government owns the land surrounding it. Gov. Rivers estimated the cost of construction as little as $1,000 to $1,500, provided it is practicable.

ERECT BUILDING FOR ENGINEERS

DETROIT —(U.P.)— Construction of a $1,600,000 endowed building for engineers, without precedent in the nation, is under way here.

The building, to be called the Horace H. Rackham Educational Memorial Building, will be in three basic groups. It will be 400 feet long, varying in width from 150 to 65 feet at the ends.

Permanent headquarters of the extension service of the University of Michigan and the Engineering Society of Detroit will be housed in the building.

Girl, 21, Named Town Clerk In Short Campaign

SEATTLE, Wash. — (U.P.) — Only two months after she became 21 years old, pretty Pauline Carey was elected town clerk of Issaquah a suburban community of 763 persons.

Miss Carey did not even file her candidacy. Her campaign consisted of passing out "stickers" on election day. But she defeated Mrs. Minnie W. Schomber, who had been town clerk for eight years.

But then Issaquah was in the throes of some unusual situations on election day recently.

The ballots contained instructions to vote for three candidates for the city council, although there were only two vacancies. Thrifty citizens, not wanting to waste their votes, balloted on all three vacancies.

In the resultant confusion, Joe Yourglich, who received 60 fewer votes than his two opponents, became a "councilman without portfolio."

SLACKS GIVEN COURT ENTREE

Philadelphia Judges Permit Trousered Women Within Law's Sanctum.

PHILADELPHIA —(INS)— Women in slacks are perfectly welcome in Philadelphia's courtrooms. A consensus of this city's jurists showed almost unanimous tolerance of trousered ladies.

Their stand differs radically from that taken by Federal Judge A. P. Murrah, of Tulsa, Okla. He had a slacks-wearing woman ousted from the courtroom and threatened to jail the next bailiff who admitted a female so attired.

Judge Murrah should be grateful for such modesty," exclaimed Judge Raymond MacNeille of Common Pleas Court. "The modern tendency is toward much less."

Municipal Judge Joseph G. Tumolillo disapproves of trousers for ladies because they're a "masculine" prerogative, but he "can't tell women how to dress."

Orphan's Judge Robert V. Bolger, a bachelor, thinks a woman's clothes have nothing to do with deciding a case. "A judge who is really occupied with the proceedings," he explained, "cannot be distracted by a woman's choice of dress."

"If a woman should come to court wearing slacks, I would give her the same consideration as the rest," summed up Judge Adrian Bonnelly, a widower.

"In these modern times, a woman is entitled to wear whatever she considers comfortable, provided it is decent."
